BOEHLERS ("BAHLER" or "BÖHLER") -- AMERICA BOUND

1849 and 1853

This is principally the story of five children of Peter Böehler and Wilhelmina Chlemacher from Amtwahn, Burgschwalbach, Nassau, Germany, who came to America in 1849 and 1853 and settled in Huron County, Ohio. It's a review of the times and the thinking of the people with whom they associated or whom they contacted. These, with their descendants, are the kind of people that made Ohio. About four hundred and eighty-five names are involved in this family in 1954.

1. Johanetta Boehler Hyman
2. Maria Margaretha Boehler Horn
3. Johann Phillipp Boehler
4. Elizabeth Boehler Knoll

"This book isn't born of only praying;
It's built of hair that's slowly graying,
And fingers cramped from all their writing,
And jagged nails from excessive biting;
And tingling nerves and horrid stages,
Of strong desire to tear up pages.
It's built of doleful perseverance,
And a frightful yen for disappearance,
The flesh that pound by pound keeps dropping,
And time that could be spent in shopping.
It takes to make a geneological study
A human head -- unbowed, but bloody.
Strange that when one should make it lusty,
It seems to be so dry and dusty."

PREFACE

This information about the Boehlers in America is written for the younger generation and those to come. Right now (1954) in America, it is a fad to know nothing of your mother or father's people. Too, with so many families the mother's family is the only one the children hear or heard about. The men were busy or otherwise. Too, we seem to be emerging into a 'matriarchial society.'

The unappreciated efforts, thoughts and decisions of the ancestors should be retold. They were very important in the lives of all of us. This pioneer immigrant period was a distinct period and at a place. Some would fail to find their homesteads in America. We will picture and locate some. Also we will give uncertain information of those in Germany that it might help in locating them if anyone went to Germany and also some might write there,

Although here are some facts of your forbearers, you will never find that feel of the country as it was fifty to one hundred years ago. You would not find people like Der Unkle and Die Tauntes, or their children. There would be no space or time for them now.

These diagrams are an easy way to trace your relationship. There was much work that went into them. There, no doubt, are errors. They are not all my errors. You can correct them, but give me all the corrections.

To most of you the nineteenth century is as remote as the thirteenth. This is to some extent a story of a way of living. These people were part of the actors of that time. I doubt if we will find a much better way. It is well we cherish it. It had in it - integrity and idealism; generosity and individualism; stamina and intestinal fortitude.

Let us make more of our inheritance. Let us take advantage of it in America. Most of us were delayed a generation because of both the thinking of the Germans and the Americans. There never should have been a German-American generation. They should have been assimilated sooner. These 'outlanders,' although persecuted or oppressed, have become leading citizens or parents of them. We were often called the 'Damdutch.' In spite of it, some of us went on. Some couldn't, or didn't -- they were frustrated. This is another story.

This is a record of a family who helped subdue a wild, wooded, and undeveloped part of America. Also -- they were living during that transition period caused by the industrial revolution, which brought large cities and changed the ways. The older inhabitants (Yankees) went to the cities -- shrewd business men, manipulating and exploiting to survive. The newcomers, the peasants, bought their farms. Read the preface of "The Green Bay Tree," and one can understand the last two generations better, or it may be your generation.

To some, it is the tragedy of men and women "lost somewhere between." A story of some caught in a period of social transition during which they could find no rest. They would wriggle helplessly and fail -- lonely men caught by the savage rush of the times. Some of our people adjusted rapidly. They adopted, adapted and became adept in some one phase. The shrewder and less worthy characteristics seemed needed, to compete; i.e., brashness, selfishness, aggressiveness, less concern for others, very hard work, and extra good health.

If you find little about you or your family, it is because you gave me little. There were very few left to learn much from. Those that knew were gone. Cemeteries, records, wills, deeds, censuses, passports, and Bureau of Statistics of Ohio were sought.

The family diagrams show relationships, descendents, wives, husbands, children, ages and other information and believe they tell much of the story in fewer words. Could you continue to record information and pass it along?

Have faith. If you would get to know more of your families you would find interest and, maybe, even like them. I took some liberties, as author and compiler. Granddaughter of J. Philip Boehler - daughter of Wilhelmina Boehler Meyer --

BACKGROUND OF THE IMMIGRANTS

From 1848 to 1853

Period of "Refugees of The German Revolution."

PART I

Many Germans came to United States as a result of the tragic failure of the Revolutions of 1848-49 in Europe. This immigration of the 1848-ers, included liberals, republicans and radicals. Men who were from universities, steeped in intellectual tradition of Kant and Schiller, ardent and impractical reformers as Heinzen and Weitling and heroes like Hacker. But it had plain people, farmers, clerks, worker or small business men who found the prevailing atmosphere so oppressive and economic conditions so uncertain that they resolved to build their future in a republic across the sea which promised food and a place in the sun.

This group of immigrants were inaccurately known in American History as well as among the local people. All immigrants were on the defensive against American "Nativist" and they furnished the proud and aggressive leadership needed to cope with the attitude of the Yankee. Many of these forty-eighters and niners brought their culture from the old to the new world. They figured in the rise of republican party, civil war, in religion, music, medicine, education, crafts, invention and professions. This group loved liberty sufficiently to risk their lives and break ties in its defense.

When PHILIP BOEHLER came to United States with his sisters, Mrs. Horn and Mrs. Knoll in 1849 only 63,148 Germans entered the United States. In the next four years it rose to 229,512. 1853 was the period Taunte Heyman and Scheldt came. 50% were farmers and 26% were artisans. The pressure was so great in Germany that in Baden in one day 3,000 applicants applied for information, ways and means to leave.

Official records have it that men of character, integrity and property, thieves, beggars, mother of illegitimate children were shipped to United States. The real cause of leaving was hope for better subsistence and political dissatisfaction in Germany. To some it was jail or the poorhouse. They hurried to leave before another revolution would break.

Many traveled on returning cotton vessels to New Orleans or Baltimore with little or no conveniences, packed like sardines in a black hole. They were frequently robbed before they left the homeland, then on a ship, and shamelessly exploited on arriving to their destination in United States. Food was inadequate, spoiled and often there was no water. Many became ill and died. Many trunks, bags, etc. were on the wharves without an owner, because the owner's body rested on bottom of the sea. Then when in America, they were overcharged by "runners," booking offices, etc. Everywhere exploited. They did not know the language. They often had to ride bad freight cars and then sleep on the floors because they were "foreigners and Dutchmen." Many earlier Germans who won their confidence, swindled them. They came in steerage to go to farms or cities as St. Louis, New Orleans, Cincinnati.

There were some relief organizations at port cities which helped the foreigners. On the river boats many received brutal treatment - as many as twenty or thirty died on one voyage. There was help now and then, but the adjustment from one country to another, one language to another, one culture pattern to another was hard to face as they struggled to find new roots.

PART II

Germans In America

In an America without kings and princes, petty bureaucrats, state police, state church or censorship, they tried again to make a living. The earlier Germans were becoming the comfortable middle class with sometime for leisure. The Germans wanted to defend their language against narrow-minded Nationalists. Thus, they retarded their assimilation to normal Americanization and we have the German-American. To overcome inferiority complex they (the German Americans) loudly acclaimed their superiority of their culture, schools, society and press with some justification. It was difficult to find employment in a new country so many took any menial job to support themselves. They found freedom but no bread.

The plain folks of Germany listened to the educated, able and sincere enthusiasts for world reform. Some were glad to have a place to raise their heads -- however, they learned fast about their rights and freedom of man. The "Nativist" of America were rabidly against the German "reformer" and his ideas. Some 1848-ers wanted to return to Germany to make a republic out of the Empire (which was being formed then) using each division as a state and do away with kaiser, princes, control of the church as part of the government and other hindrances to liberty and democracy. This was in their minds.

They were mostly abolishmentists. They were against slavery in the United States so the South disliked them and their cause. The Germans were for beer as they claimed prohibition interfered with personal liberty. But one of their leaders, Heinzen attacked the "German Bock Beer Festivals" and maintained that lager beer had made his country-men stupid, quarrelsome and reactionary, and destroyed their capacity for cultural and political activity. Someone said where there were more than three Germans - one started a saloon for the other two to quarrel in. Some were opposed to the Puritanical Sunday - a dull Sunday and wanted it to be a day of drinking, pool, bowling, singing and dancing (not all good). A great day for outings. They locked horns with the Catholic Jesuits and church principles and interfering with choice, liberty and education. Many free thinkers who varied from agnosticism to avowed atheism, from militant anti-clericalism to a more moderate program, which have a certain similarity with more liberal Protestant faiths of present day, such as Unitarianism, Universalism, liberal Congregationalism or Community Churches. They were opposed to rigid controls which in America was the result of American Puritanism. Some opposed all theological systems, creeds, dogmas, supernaturalism and revelations and regarded church ritual as unworthy of intelligent thinking men. Among the refugees, there were German Catholic, German Lutheran German free thinkers and this was not for unity. Heinzen, a German leader, rejected transcendentalism in every form. All that is, he contended, is the result of natural processes. What men call "spirit" stems from a man's nervous and physiological structure. Psychology is a science based on physiology. He emphasized the law of nature; eternity of the Universe; inevitability of never ending change; man as the product of his environment and mind the highest function of matter. In history he found no divine process, only a law of change and progress. He used the word "God" only in the sense that "God is the world, and the world God," He believed in truth, beauty, justice and human happiness, harmony, not in self-indulgence but a severe code of ethics and morals.

Many Germans believed, "We must give up slavery or we must give up freedom." The Yankees did not feel that way but the German didn't trust him as a tradesman, therefore he couldn't trust him in this. You can see that the republican party was made larger by the Germans. They were admirers of Tom Paine.

I merely mention this as it was with these people our forebearers mingled and talked. They no doubt gathered some of these ideas and ideals and they were among reformers. They started churches, schools, some remained very rigid in respect to discipline similar to German military discipline. Many good intentions were misinterpreted. Our forebearers had some quarrels on the difference in view points on religion, creed and politics. Some learned easier and some took to education and research. They were not fooled easily. These were not interested in returning to Germany for changing a corrupt government and making a republic of it - but were glad to be in American, erect homes, and here a place to make money and raise their heads. However, they were classed by some native America as undesirable - something between the status of a native and a negro because of the revolutionary activities and trouble some Germans who were wanting to change everything in America as well as Germany.

Many Germans of Cleveland, Sandusky, Massillon, Columbus, etc. - had a political platform of Free Germans in Ohio - in 1854. They denounced dogma and ecclesiasticism. They attacked "Nativists" and temperance fanatics; they approved the aims of organized labor and free homesteads. Opposed reading of the Bible and praying in public schools and legislative bodies, and Sunday closing laws. They were strongly antislavery. They wanted repeal of fugitive slave law of 1850. They wanted public education, progressive inheritance taxes, abolition of capital punishment, 10 hour day, new foreign policy. Cremation was still regarded by most Americans with horror; was especially favored by many reformers. It was what some said was a 'non-christian burial.' They believe they could or could not do so. Freedom of choice in other words.

What if these reforms could have been carried out in Germany - as well as in America, at least the better ones - what a different world we would have in 1954. Today there is a great effort being made in United States to bring similar reforms about in the world.

Many were well trained and educated, working for 20 cents a day, or finding no work and nothing to eat, maybe a 5 cent glass of beer with whatever food came with it. Many could quote Homer but were forced to work with pick and shovel on canals. Ph. D's "fiddled" or painted. In the eyes of most native Americans they were "Dutchmen" and more generally "damned Dutchmen."

The women shared the hardships, depression, and cultural isolation of their husbands and sons. Many died after a few years in America, at an early age. The forty-eights and forty-niners had a gruesome record of hardship and early death in the land of freedom. Many men of genius - free thinkers - reformers, worked tirelessly on two continents. Many drank because of their "shattered" hopes. Some editors of German papers became poverty stricken but did not abandon their faith in United States as the worlds lost hope for liberty.

Many drowned their sorrow in alcohol; they were found in mental hospitals at early ages. There was a long list of suicides of forty-eighters. "One forty-eighter wrote about the naked grim life of America, full of deceit and hypocrisy, devoid of sentiment." Education was of mediocre level, chewing and spitting tobacco was ridiculed by them. Many plain Germans were so busy making an honest living that they had no theories or complaints about America.

These early Germans were anxious to have good schools and have their children educated. Small children in kindergarten, better texts and teachers, physical education and more cultured subjects. Separate German school, connected with the Church. St. Peters Lutheran Church at Pontiac was an example of what was created for the many Lutheran families of this group. It taught Germans and English. This was not a good way to be Americanized and hence the second generation remained quite German in social pattern and not until they went to Public School and German was offered as a language, did a change take place and they became Americans and not German-Americans.

Of all the newcomers to United States - the forty-eighters were unique. Not the numbers but the extraordinary ability, spirit and influence. They were an important group during an important period in American History. If they were tactless, impatient and impractical, it may have been their zeal which sprang from genuine devotion to a fixed set of principles for which they were ready to "scale the heavens." As a whole they were an honorable lot. They had their quota of vagabonds. They wanted America to reform to their theories.

As they, the German Americans, became older and successful materially some radical ideas became conservative. Germany became less the land of poets and thinkers and free spirits and more a nation of faith in material things, discipline and physical strength. The later Germans respected power, law and order over the old ideals of humanitarianism, liberty, justice of the 1848-ers. With the decline of influence of 1848ers, the flowering time of German culture in America reached its end.

Many ordinary Germans, uneducated and unnamed in History, had their lives blended harmoniously with the great American stream, and they found both freedom and economic opportunity in the Republic which gave them their new start in life but also gave America a great lift with the qualities they retained.

PART III

Der Uncle and Taunte Horn and Knoll Arrive in 1849

There was so much uncertainty in Germany about 1848 ! There was a conflict in developing an Empire under a Kaiser; many military men; and taxes. Many wanted a Republic developed, but in any case their "saber was rattling." The average German people would be unhappy and without opportunity. PETER BOEHLER and his wife, WILHELMINE OHLEMACHER of Bechtheim were average people. He was a herdsman. They had eight children. The eldest, Wilhelm, would alone inherit the stone two-story home from his father. The other children would have to seek further for help. Andreas, in English, Andrew, was the youngest and remained with his parents. There seemed to have been a sister or niece Phillippine, also young. More will be about these in Germany elsewhere. This family seems to have been from Katternswalbach, Herzogthums, Nassau, a small village. The post office today is Post Penrod, Nassau, even if writing to Katternswalbach. Somewhere it is written they were from Amtwehn, Burgwalbach, Nassau, a little place or civic division. Bechtheim was really a church or parish.

The industrial age had not yet developed in Germany to give jobs. And as there were so many leaving Germany to go to America for freedom, and to escape the oppressive military and to gain an opportunity to make a place in the sun, J. PHILLIP BOEHLER, age 26, Mr. and Mrs. P. WILHELM HORN, (Margaretha Boehler, age 28) of Kerberg, Germany nearby, and another sister, ELIZABETH BOEHLER KNOLL, age 22, and husband CHRISTIAN KNOLL left home for Antwerp.

When Mrs. Horn left her mother, she did not shed tears - her mother claimed "she had a heart of stone." Little wonder ! They had had two babies die - she was pregnant and what promise did the new country hold ? Would she have a ship baby ? Would its chances be greater to live ? Would they have a better living ?

It seems they left Antwerp between March 1 to 10, 1849. It took them sixty-three days to arrive at New Orleans, then via Mississippi and Ohio to Cincinnati, arriving about May 10, or 11, 1849. It must have been a cotton boat which took cotton to Antwerp, a textile city. Those boats were not equipped for many passengers and had poor accommodations; no boat physician; no meals prepared for one; little washing water. They carried their food, mostly dried, like crackers and butter, in a crock. It had to be rat-proof. Can you imagine being sea sick on those small boats ? Little fruit, if any; large bundles to carry their possessions. MARGARETHA HORN, just off the boat in Cincinnati, hired a buggy to take her to a hotel and there she had Philip Carl Wilhelm Horn on May 12, 1849. He is known by his Ohio relatives as William C. but by his Kansas people as Charles W. Horn, (Charles is English for Carl.) Cincinnati had few hospitals and cholera was everywhere. (See family register of Horns. They had nine children.)

Although born under some difficulties, William Horn grew up to be a pioneer in Kansas and made a sizeable fortune for himself. He was an able fellow and is written up in history of Kansas. (See biography.)

The Horns left the two Boehlers (Philip and Elizabeth 's husband Knoll) at Cincinnati, to go to St. Louis where was a brother of P. Wilhelm Horn, believed to be Philip Horn. For some reason they did not remain there but followed the Boehlers to Monroeville, as did the Philip Horns who were in St. Louis. They had to write to Germany to find out where in Ohio the Boehlers went before they could go.

J. PHILIP BOEHLER was single and about twenty-six years old. He worked as a gardener in Cincinnati for a while, no doubt to earn a little money (as it was said he arrived with seventy-five cents in America) and also to learn the language better and how to get where he wanted to go. It is not known, but they might have gone via river and canal and then via Baltimore and Ohio to Monroeville. However, there were other possible routes.

Little is known of ELIZABETH and husband KNOLL at time of their arrival, since those that might know are dead and it seems the ones alive were not told. Everett Seel, her great grandson, has a crock in which she carried her crackers and better. Her daughter Louise Seel made a lamp base of it. It is lovely. Stop at Everett's and see it, it is blue on light grey. That should never leave the family. These Knolls settled near the others on the Townline Road, where Otto Seel and Everett Seel live. Elizabeth was a widow early and raised her family on that farm.

Johann Philip - called Philip Bohler

Since there were no cafeterias and a farmer must have a wife, Philip looked around for one. He saw another German who had arrived in 1852 at the age of twenty-one, so he married at twenty-nine, Margaretha Seible on March 14, 1852. She was a quite suitable person since Philip was aggressive and a man of action. Her personality must have fitted nicely with his plans. She was the daughter of Casper Seible. She brought a little money with her. However, before he met her he worked for $9 a month on a farm belonging to a "Yankee." There he learned to speak English. Among the few he worked for was a Mr. Banta, who owned the Dan Heyman farm, Route # 547. He worked also for Meggesson's in Lyme Township in 1852, Huron County, Ohio. In a few years he bought a farm paying a little and selling at a profit. In 1854 he bought another in Sherman Township, selling it at a profit. In 1856, he bought another in Peru which was the one retained as his home on Horn Road and Bohler Road.

This was a large tract of land, which he divided equally; then his sister Margaretha Horn and he drew lots as to which one each would get. It seemed he cooperated more with the Horns, since they were close neighbors.

The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been admitted to the office of the Secretary of the Board of Education since the last report of the Board.

PART IV

Taunte Hyman and Scheldt Arrive in 1853

JOHANETTA, the eldest sister in Germany, did heavy work at a mill. WILHELMINA, a younger sister, was a dairy maid and did other menial work at the age of nineteen or twenty. They did not want to continue, so were eager to find out if America held something better.

Four years later than the first arrivals, in 1853, JOHNETTA, and her husband, WILLIAM HEIMAN, and her daughter DORATHEA, thirteen years old, together with her younger sister, WILHELMINA KATHERINE BOEHLER SCHELDT and her husband, PHILIP SCHELDT, came to America via New York City. Philip Scheldt had been in America before, but went after his bride. This was their wedding trip. Mr. Scheldt brought his parents and two sisters, Seibel and Crecelius. Young PHILIP ERF was in this party also, and later married Dorathea. The route was not so long. They went to London, then to New York City in thirty-one days. Then by barge and canal boat, via Hudson and Mohawk and Erie Canal and Lake Erie shore to Sandusky, then via Baltimore and Ohio to Pontiac, Ohio, where the family and other Germans had centered.

An incident on board ship - Johanetta was sea sick most of the time and DORATHEA had to help do the family cooking. Young Erf helped her get her turn at the common cook stove.

PART V

The Boehler (Bähler or Böhler) family and others settling here were of the old line German Lutherans. Sober and dogmatic, frugal, farsighted, reserved and self-reliant. These Germans were resented by the Yankee mid-westerners. The Germans, too, felt superior in culture, training, etc. and their children were urged to marry only into other German families. There was a certain kith and kin they belonged to. The Yankees were not well thought of nor considered industrious and thrifty, and not well trained in the eyes of the Germans. The Yankees thought the Germans beneath them, and they were to do the menial labor. To give an illustration: Dorathea would stand, days, ironing large petticoats, which would be worn only one time and then be returned to be washed and ironed again. The Yankees were Nativist, an organization opposing immigrants, and did not feel eager to associate socially with the immigrants, and the Germans had German culture and education, and felt they lived better than the Yankees. The Germans were good cooks and providers, and good farmers, neat and clean. They worked for the Yankees, but soon found that distasteful, and the independent spirit took hold. They soon purchased many of these Yankee homes and farms.

The home of the Germans was a unit - a close-knit unit. Home and church were important. Politically, many were Republicans. Lincoln was their candidate, as he disliked slavery. However, some Germans were not interested in Lincoln's cause and voted for Douglas. They did not want war. They purchased a Yankee, and paid him eighty dollars to go to war in their stead. After all, they had come here to get out of war, and they had bought farms, and had families to care for.

The stores, banks, and shops were in the hands of the former New Englanders, who were Republicans. The New Englanders were Methodists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Congregationalists. The Germans were Lutheran or Evangelical, if they were Protestant. Because of lack of information, the Germans were often cheated. The Germans built large houses for their large families.

Phillip Boehler helped many new immigrants from Germany. He made homes for whole families, until they could establish themselves. He fed them and sheltered them many times in his own home. Later, he had some houses built on his farms, and there the families lived and worked for him. Their idea of America in the early part of their adventure here was given by him. He could talk English, and did help them meet their needs, and often helped them purchase farms, and generally translated the American way to them, however many were not assimilated in customs and thinking.

Hand labor was the only way of harvesting grain. They used a cradle, a scythe-type of tool. The men would swing the cradle, and this area would be known as a "station" in the field. The youngest members of the family, and often their wives, would bind the grain into bundles for them. The Ohlemachers were a family that did this. The Dietesfelds, Wagners and Stevens are descendants of these Ohlemachers and still in 1940, looked kindly toward the Boehlers. The Boehler family occupied great areas of land, located close together. The Scheldts, the Heimans, Erfs, Horns, and Knolls, all in Lyme, Peru and Ridgefield Townships.

Brother Philip was a leader. He was eager to be successful. He would assume responsibility among his sister's families and any other Germans who needed help. To his nieces and nephews, and sisters, he was known as "Der Unkle" or "The Uncle." He must be consulted. He was consulted! His opinions were well based. He knew if there were mistakes he would stand by and help. He was generous, well-meaning, and his opinion was sought after by others. Among people around Monroeville, especially the Yankees, he was known as "King Philip." King Philip of the Germans. The Protestant Germans usually consulted him. Perhaps his nearest relatives least appreciated him.

The Boehler family lived near Pontiac, Peru Township, (a R. R. Station on the B & O), where earlier the Indian Chief Pontiac would pass. He and his sisters' families were charter members of the St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church there (1861.) The Church and school were an important part of his family life. The German minister of this church for many years, a Rev. Schmogrow, who came in 1859, had much to do with the ethical, religious and educational training of these families. He was unusually well trained, from the University of Berlin. He taught reverence, courtesy, and respect. He taught during the week, but preached on Sundays. The minister was given wood, meat, flour, and other provisions, with little money. Rev. Schmogrow served fourteen years. There seemed to have been a disagreement within the church, so the Schelds, Stotzes, some Knolls, Hasses, Horns and Meyers of Monroeville, formed together with others, the Evangelical Church there. These people built with their own hands the church and the school. They really were in earnest about the needs that these institutions could supply.

The aunts were called Taunte Horn, Taunte Knoll, Taunte Heiman, or Taunte Scheldt, but Philip was Der Unkle. Many were the folk ways of these people. Among them were known the "First Christmas" and "Second Christmas" celebrations, the first being held at one home, and the second at another. If it was snowing, they went in sleds drawn by horses with bells, if not, in wagons. The minister was invited too. They feasted on these days; little want was tolerated among the neighbors. Everyone was well fed and housed but all worked.

At funerals all the relatives would attend. After the brief service in the home, great processions of carriages, with the oldest of the nearest kin following the casket, and then the next oldest, and so on, would go to the church for services there. Perhaps a hundred to a hundred and fifty carriages might be in a procession. The casket would be put in front in the church, near the altar, and after the sermon and eulogy, all people, would walk by to view it. The body would then be taken to the cemetery, all following again. After this, the family would return to the bereaved home where a banquet or feast would have been prepared by neighbor women. A renewal of old friendships and acquaintances was possible among kith and kin. A reunion of relatives was held; it was a time to get acquainted and reaffirm friendships.

Quilting Bees, Sewing Bees, Apple Butter Cooking, Strawberry Festivals were all social events, where neighbors and friends could come and work together to help someone get a quilt, a carpet, or just generally to help one another. The hostesses would serve fine meals and the children would especially enjoy the food and the ride home.

Brother Philip's wife, Margaretha Seible, died at the age of fifty-two in 1883. The two younger sons, (Otto, fourteen, and Philip, sixteen) were the only ones left at home at the time of her death; all of the others were married. Louise and husband went to his Boehler home to keep house for her father and brothers.

After some time, (in 1887) Philipp went to Mansfield, Ohio, and married Mrs. Jeanetta Faust Knobel (a sister of Charlie Faust). She had a daughter, Emma; now Emma Carolyn Knobel Newton Lowry (born December 1, 1881), whom he reared and sent through Monroeville High School.

After his second marriage, Mr. Boehler and family lived for a few months in Bellevue, Ohio, but soon purchased a house at the southeast corner of Fulton and Monroe Streets in Monroeville, where he lived in retirement until his death in 1897.

Mrs. Boehler and Emma remained there until Mrs. Boehler died in 1899. Mr. Boehler and his first wife, lie in the church yard at Pontiac. His marker is among the largest in the cemetery. This was the church he helped create. He left each of his six children a substantial farm and as much to his widow. He probably owned over 1,000 acres and other property; from 75¢ to well to do. All his sisters and families did similarly.

1. Marketing grain from the Boehler families' homes was done by wagon, sometimes driving as far as Milan, fifteen miles away. Many times it was very cold. Long scarfs (Baldden) - 20 feet long, one foot wide, homespun and home knitted wool, which the men used, kept them warm on these trips. One some of these lonely trips home, there sometimes were robberies as the highwaymen knew they had sold grain and would have money in their pockets.

Notes from Letters of the Boehlers in Germany

The following are notes from a collection of letters:

WILHELM BOEHLER, the oldest brother of J. Philip and sisters, had three sons and one daughter. Eldest Gustav; next, Arnold; and youngest, Wilhelm. There was a sister Emilin who married. She died in 1917. Wilhelm, Sr. died about 1888. His widow withstood World War I, and died in 1933 at the age of eight-five.

Gustav Boehler died in 1925. His children are in Katternswalbach. Wilhelm, Jr. withstood both wars, and was still alive and working in a leather store. (1953) Gustav had a shop called Handlung von Gustav Boehler. This was on a picture postcard. Arnold died in 1946, and has two sons still living. They tell about hardships and taxes. Wilhelm Boehler, Jr. had a Saddle and Upholstering Shop.

Nothing has been mentioned of ANDREAS BOEHLER, the very youngest remaining in Germany. It seems he had a daughter Phillipine who married Philip Best. One of her daughters went to Eisenhoffen and had three children. Another of her daughters died in Worsdorf. She had one daughter - no name known. A son of hers died in 1914 and left three children so Bests could be found in Katternswalbach.

From hearsay, there were eight or nine children in all in the old Boehler Family. I am able to account for seven. From hearsay, there was a very young girl left in Germany. Perhaps more correspondence or visiting Germany might clarify it. Since everybody died of cholera in those days, perhaps two did die earlier.

From memory there were two children, Carl and Louise Ohelmacher who were cousins that were deaf and dumb. There are pictures of them.

Willi Boehler, one of Arnold's sons, will answer letters in 1954. His address is: "Willi Bähler, Katternschwalbach, Post Michelbach, Nassau, Germany."

These are the sacrificing ancestors who made choices to come to America to be free. These were the pioneers who made choices to be protestants and fought for it. We - their descendants, are their HEIRS. We should be followers in their faith in Protestant Christian ideals and freedom. We should be followers in assuming economic independence political participants, helpful and cooperative in family, community and country.

WILLIAM ERF, SR., oldest son of Philip and Dorothea (Boehler) Hyman Erf, was born May 7, 1857 in Peru Township at what was later known as the Louis Erf Farm.

He attended the local school at the corner of Route 99 and Horn Road. Later, the German School at Monroeville, and finally the Monroeville Public School. He was trained in the Immanuel Evangelical Church and was an officer many times. He worked on his father's farm until he married.

On March 8, 1883 he married WILHELMINA AUGUSTA (BOEHLER) SCHELDT, fifth child of Philip and Wilhelmina Boehler Scheldt. They started farming on a farm purchased by his parents ten years prior, from the Edgars in Lyme Township, who gave employment to his mother when she migrated to America and admired it. This was a characteristic of many Germans, to buy the farm that gave them employment. In a few years, after establishing themselves, William and his wife purchased the farm from his parents.

They built barns and houses. Dairying seemed to be their specialty, and marketing of milk was a problem which they improved by organizing a Co-Op Creamery at Kimball, Ohio, and later at Monroeville. In 1918 a registered guernsey herd was started and breeding and dairying was carried on. A herd of fifty were, and still are, maintained. So well have the cows been cared for that they now (1954) have an accredited herd, by Federal test. Also, every animal is in advanced register, meaning each animal has high production records.

William Erf was an agitator for good schools and served on Lyme Special School Board for about twenty-five years. He was a director of the Hess Hardware Co., a charter member of the Lyme Grange and generally a leader in his community. He was honored by the "Ohio Farmer" as one of the first twenty men to be called a "Master Farmer of Ohio" for that particular year.

In 1901 he had an accident with a corn shredder in which he lost his left hand. At the age of sixty-three he was paralyzed and lived at his family home under the faithful care of his children, until the age of seventy-three. He died November 9, 1930. He is buried in Riverside Cemetery.

WILHELMINA (BOEHLER) SCHELDT ERF was the fifth child of Philip and Wilhelmina Boehler Scheldt, born February 2, 1862. She, too, was trained in the same local school as William--on Route 99 and Horn Road. At the age of twenty-one she married William Erf at her home near Pontiac. She belonged to and was trained in the Immanuel Evangelical Church. She and her husband took part in about the same activities and were a cooperative team which lead to success in farm life.

She was a charter member of Lyme Grange and lecturer of the Pomona Grange. She often jested that she have engraved on her memorial a milk can, as she worked so long with them.

Mrs. Erf, "Minnie", as many knew her, was a capable woman with good managing ability. She worked in her church, the Immanuel Evangelical in Monroeville and the Ladies' Aid. She held office many times. She had dignity and poise. She drove a white horse with phaeton--a buggy with fenders--to her meetings. She mingled with her kith and kin and enjoyed them as they did her.

This couple had four children: NORMA, CORA, ELZY, and WILLIAM PHILIP.

NORMA SCHELDT ERF, eldest child of William and Wilhelmina Scheldt Erf, was born January 26, 1884; died September 15, 1951. She spent her childhood on Chestnut Ridge Farm and in Lyme Township High School. She went to Normal School and taught in North Monroeville in 1903 and 1904, and in Monroeville grades about 1906; later graduated from Michigan State Normal College. She received a degree of Bachelor of Science in Education at the University of Wisconsin. She spent about twelve years as critic teacher and assistant principal of the Normal School at Ft. Wayne, Indiana. She was on the Ohio Institute force five years. She came back home to Chestnut Ridge Farm and worked with her brother and sisters in establishing a large herd of registered guernsey cattle. She was secretary of the North Central Guernsey Breeders' Association for twenty-seven years. She was a Master of Lyme Grange and a member of the County, State, and National Grange. She was a Republican Committeewoman from Lyme Township. She belonged to the County Red Cross, and to the Eastern Star. Her hobbies were "Nature Study," birds, flowers, rocks, etc., and reed weaving.

Norma had a heart problem with thyroid difficulty. She had been taken to a hospital for an operation, and died in September, 1951. She is buried on the family lot, in Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio.

CORA ERF was the second child born to William and Wilhelmina Augusta (Scheldt) Erf, on May 26, 1886, at the home farm in Lyme Township, now known as "Chestnut Ridge Farm".

She attended Lyme School and graduated from the high school there in 1904. She taught in North Monroeville School for two years, when she was called home to be with her mother, who was ill, and help with the work which must be done on a farm where there are lots of activities. She was a natural lover of music and having studied under the best teachers then available, turned to part-time teaching in primary music. This she did for many years.

From early childhood when she followed her father to the barn (rather than help with the housework) she milked cows, and loved that work so much that it became second nature and made it an easier task, when incidents and accidents in the family called on her to assume the duties of carrying on the work of the Registered Dairy Cattle Herd and the farm.

She was one of the first in the county to keep poultry production records, one of the first three women to hold office on the County Farm Bureau Board, a seventh degree Grange member, a charter member of Lyme Grange and Master of same for two years. Also, matron of the Juvenile Grange for eleven years and held office in many of the other stations of county and local grange. She is a member of the Eastern Star. At an early age she became a member of the Immanuel Evangelical Church.

ELZY WILHELMINA ERF was the third daughter born to William and Wilhelmina Augusta (Scheldt) Erf on January 28, 1892, at the family home in Lyme Township, now known as "Chestnut Ridge Farm."

Having two older sisters, she was always considered the "baby" of the family until the arrival of a little brother six years later. To the men, then employed on the farm, and living in the home she became their pet; so much so, that to their passing day, several of them always referred to her as "Our Little Elsie"

She attained her education in the schools of Lyme Special District (which at that time maintained a high school), and graduated from there in 1909. Always interested in educational and community projects, she helped organize a club which had for its object the promotion of post graduate work in and around the schools. This club was known as Lyme Buoy Club and later, became the setting for Lyme Grange No. 2027, which was organized in 1915. So, as a charter member her interests in this organization were such, that she served as lecturer the first fifteen years. Then served as Lady Assistant Steward, Master, and again a fifteen term as Secretary.

At present, she is again Master of the Grange. She is also a seventh degree Granger. Her church affiliations began at an early age in the Monroeville Evangelical Church and is a member of Althea Chapter, order of the Eastern Star.

When three years of age her mother taught her to recite and encouraged by her great grandmother (Johannette Boehler Heimann) learned to love this art. It became a hobby.

WILLIAM PHILIP (SCHELDT) ERF, JR. was born in Lyme Township, Huron County, February 6, 1898, the son and youngest child of William and Minnie (Boehler) Scheldt Erf. He was a member of Immanuel Evangelical Church, and later a member of the Congregational Church.

He was a graduate of Lyme and Bellevue High Schools and took courses in agriculture and dairying at O.S.U. Following in his father's footsteps, he took up the work of farming and specialized in the dairy industry at an early age, when his father was incapacitated by illness. It was through his efforts and those of his three sisters, Norma, Cora, and Elzy W., that they carried on the herd of registered Guernsey cattle on the home farm known as "Chestnut Ridge Farm." Some very creditable records were made in this herd and much effort was spent in establishing the "Golden Guernsey" Milk Market in Ohio.

He continued at his chosen work and gave much of his time to the furthering of public accomplishments, including the new school building. He was president of the school board; the first president of the Cleveland Milk Producer's Federation and president of the Ohio Guernsey Breeders Association at the time of his death. He met with an accidental traffic death at the age of forty-two years, with much planned work left undone.

A genial man, a profound student of his work. His ability and success, his broad outlook on life, and the habit of always "going the second mile" made him a friend and neighbor sincerely beloved. He was killed February 2, 1940.

He was married on June 21, 1928, to MARGUERITE ALICE CLAYTON, daughter of John and Elizabeth Jones Clayton, of North Monroeville, who is a graduate of Monroeville High School, a graduate of Huron County Normal School, and a teacher by profession.

He had two children: JEAN ERF IRWIN, born October 8, 1929, and WILLIAM CLAYTON ERF, born July 6, 1933.

AUGUST PHILIP HORN was born in Peru Township on February 6, 1856, the 4th child of William and Margaretha Horn. The Horn homestead is on Horn Road--and not far from the Lutheran Church and other relatives of his mother. He helped on the Horn farm until his marriage to LYDIA (BOEHLER) HYMAN ERF, a neighbor and relative, on February 10, 1881. They soon moved to their farm in Lyme Township, near Lyme school and near William Erf's. August and Lydia educated their children above the average for that time, sending them to Monroeville High School and with their own help all took up professions, no doubt sacrificing to do so. After the death of Lydia, August married again to MRS. LOUISE MOOSE WINSLOW. She has two children by a former marriage, LAURA AND FLORENCE WINSLOW, who were also sent to Monroeville High School. Florence is Mrs. Tom Stuart, Lyndhurst, North Carolina and Laura is in Washington D.C. Mrs. Louise Winslow Horn died in 1955 at Norwalk, Ohio. August died April 27, 1940.

LYDIA ERF HORN, the only daughter of Philip and Dorothea (Boehler) Hyman Erf, was born in Peru Township, Huron County, on November 15, 1859. She spent all her early life there on the farm. She married AUGUST PHILIP HORN on February 10, 1881. Both Lydia and August, who were cousins and neighbors, were educated similarly by Rev. William Schmogrow, pastor of St. Peter's Lutheran Church and the red school house. They established a home on their farm on Route 20--Lyme Township, near William Erf's and Lyme Special School, Huron County. Here Lydia died May 3, 1906. Four children were reared--DORA, LOUIS, ELLA AND MABEL. Lydia was ambitious and wanted for her children, education and training.

ROBERT DALE (HORN) ANDERSON born September 10, 1953.

I, DORA HORN COWELL, was born in Lyme Township on January 20, 1883, on Sandhill Road in a little house just north of the railroad tracks. This old farm house had a natural setting next to an old apple orchard and flanked by three lilac bushes and three sweet cherry trees at the edge of the road. I am the oldest child of August and Lydia Erf Horn. My brother Louis and sister Ella were also born there. We had an ordinary child's life, romping in the orchard where grazed a flock of sheep, and climbing trees was our everyday activity, and activity was our make-up.

In a few years we moved to the house on the corner of Sandhill Road and Route 20. Our sister Mabel was born there. The Lyme Township schoolhouse where we started to school is about one-fourth of a mile from our house. In those days, the school teacher always roomed and boarded in the neighborhood. The teacher was living at our house, and Mother, being pretty busy with four children, two hired men, and a school teacher, started me to school at the early age of four years. I often wonder how that teacher survived with all her different grades of pupils and me!

The climax came rather suddenly of my entrance to school. We were playing in the shop and I had climbed up and found a can of green paint, which suddenly spilled and went all over Ella's head and her dress. Momma had a time cleaning her up. So I went to school the next day.

Living so close to school, we came home at noon for dinner, and we sure were envious of the other children who carried their dinner buckets. We missed out on some of the noonday playing. We were happy when it rained for then we carried our lunch to school that day.

Even in those days we had our little feuds. There was quite a little colony of English people on the Sandhill Road. The two families of Shermans and Normans. They were a prolific lot with plenty of children, and there were two families of Dutchies as they called us, the Erf girls and us. Our roads were very sandy, and many a time after school at night the Dutchies dumped the Englishmen into the sandy road, especially after a rain!

Now at this stage of my life, in this year of 1955, we are all intermarried with those English!

At the age of fourteen I started to high school in Monroeville. The first two years I walked to the railroad track, and then rode Louis's bicycle on the side of the tracks to town. About a mile from our place would be waiting Harold Williams, and away we would go. Harold was tall and had a high geared bicycle, and his long legs just leisurely moved along while I had to peddle like fury to keep up with him! The last two years of our school life we rode the Lake Shore Electric Streetcar. It was built right beside the other tracks, and we sure enjoyed those rides. It is now out of existence.

After graduating from High School, I had a desire to become a trained nurse, but Grandma tabboed it, so our distant cousin, Dr. Ed Crecelious, talked about medicine. I was all for it. And somehow, he convinced my folks and Grandma it was all right. So, in the fall of 1902 Dad and I with my trunk in the spring wagon, went to Monroeville and I boarded the train and went to far away Cleveland to go to Medical College. I went to the Cleveland Homeopathic Medical College. The day I arrived, Ed was with me, and he met one of his class-mates who also had brought a girl to college. So they introduced us and found a room for us, and we were roommates. Many a time I cried myself to sleep for I was homesick. We lived together that year.

There were five girls in our class, which in those days were quite a lot. Myra Herrick, a trained nurse and sixteen years older than I, was in our class. I was attracted to her, and when, at the end of the first year she asked me to live with her, I jumped at the chance. My Mother met her and was so pleased, because she had an idea that Herrick would always protect me. One of the other girls, Jessie Peterson, Herrick, and I had three happy years of living together while going to college.

Ten days before graduation in 1906, Momma passed away. Then six weeks later, I took the State Board examination, and passed! In September I went to Philadelphia and interned at Womens Southern Hospital for a year. Jessie Peterson interned at Blockley Hospital in Philadelphia, so we had a wonderful year, and saw each other often. My hospital was located on Spruce Street, and our out-patients were mostly colored, in an area about five blocks to the south of Spruce Street. We had a horse ambulance and aside from going on emergencies, I also got a thrill in sitting on the front seat beside the driver and clanging the bell.

I came home and set up my office in Bellevue, Ohio. There were seven male M.D.'s, and myself, but I soon got acquainted and they were very helpful and nice to me.

In the year of 1917, war clouds loomed and became real. Mabel joined the Lakeside Unit, and they were the first unit to go to France. Naturally my thoughts were over there, and I was here, so I began pulling strings and wrote to Washington. Finally after a year, I got a telegram from Washington asking me to report for duty. Within ten days I dismantled my office and was on my first assignment. Women doctors were classed as Contract Surgeons, and our first assignment was to Mayo Clinic for intensive training in Anaesthesia for six weeks. Then I was sent to the Bronx in New York to U.S. Hospital No. 1. While there we gave anaesthetics for different surgeons. Dr. Peebles and I drew an assignment whereby we worked every other day. In those days we had many mastoid cases which had been operated on in camp. Those cases whose results were not good were all sent to Hospital No. 1. There two surgeons also worked every other day and operated on those bad results. The patient usually was put on his stomach and his head on a sandbag. After all the draping of sheets, the Anaesthetist had to sit on a footstool under the table and sheet, and feed the anaesthetic to him. By the time noon came we were almost asleep, and hot from being in such close quarters under that sheet.

One day the grape-vine indicated we were to be sent overseas. Such excitement! A few weeks before, Ella arrived from Camp Grant. We had a grant time going to New York and seeing the girls. The day my orders arrived I went in and told Ella I was going the next morning. Everything was to be very secret. The next morning at four-thirty, we seven female officers boarded a train and went to Pier 7, and waited and waited. About ten-thirty we boarded the ship. There we stood and watched them load four thousand troops, and finally about one-thirty we sailed -- we sailed out and passed the old Statue of Liberty and were on our way.

Our ship was small. It had been a lumber boat in the Mediterranean so was put in a convoy with thirteen other ships of the same size. We were on the water fourteen days. We were ordered at all times to carry life preservers, and our destination was Liverpool. For propaganda's sake, they would send a ship down the Mercy Canal every so often, simply to tell the English the Americans were coming. Going down the river, we were laid up for twelve hours at one bridge when they had to remove the smoke stack from the ship to allow us to go under the bridge. The English bridge was not high enough to allow an American-built ship to go beneath it. We landed at Manchester. While waiting in the station, I wrote a letter to my friend, Mrs. Salter, in Bellevue, Ohio. She was born in Manchester, England, and had a very good friend, Mrs. Gotboro, there. In order to let her know where I was, I wrote and said, "Mae, I had a notion this morning to hunt up Mrs. Gotboro and say Good Morning to her."

We traveled through England to South Hampton. There we were placed in a hotel and ordered to report every half hour. Finally, at seven o'clock that night we took the ship across the English Channel to Le Havre, France. There we stayed two days, and then proceeded to Paris where I met my sister Mabel at the railroad station! We slept on a cot that night together, and the next morning at seven o'clock she was on her way to the front.

We left Paris and went to Chaumont, and there we were placed in surgical teams. Each team was given a certain assignment. My assignment was to Rampont, American Red Cross Hospital No. 125. There were two corps boys, a nurse, a surgeon, an assistant, and myself on this team. On our way up we had to go through Suilly and stopped there for lunch, and took an ambulance the rest of the way. As I turned around to inquire where the mess hall was, I stared into the face of my cousin, Otto Faust! (See Chart II. 3). We had quite a few minutes of intensive conversation, and he inquired about Mabel. He was able to see Mabel the next day up at her base aboard a food truck. Our team had night duty all the time I was there. About three times a week we ~~would~~ get our breakfast, make up some bacon sandwiches, and hop the first truck or ambulance that came along going toward the front. In this manner we were able to go to see Verdun almost right up to the lines.

One day they said the armistice was signed. That night we nonchalantly left the shutters off the operating room windows and proceeded to work. About eleven o'clock, we heard a BRRRRR, and old Heinie was in the heavens. Like a flash, the electric engineer had turned off the lights and the boys put on the shutters, and then the lights went on and we continued to operate. Two days later the true armistice was signed. Then instead of wounded boys the pneumonia cases began to come down on us. After about two weeks we were sent back to Chaumont for further assignment.

I was assigned to Beaunne in the southern part of France. During my assignment there I was given a furlough of two weeks, and I met Ella in Paris and we went down to Nice on the Mediterranean. I sort of crabbed the act as I got the flu, so I was in the hospital for part of the time.

Then my next assignment was Coblenz, Germany, in the Third Army Laboratories.

In May I received orders to go home. So I went through Paris to Brest, remained there ten days waiting for a ship, came home on the Kaiserina Augusta, and arrived home on Decoration Day. After several months Ella and I opened up a maternity hospital in Ontario, Canada. We ran it for a year and then sold it. I went to Boston for post-graduate work in pediatrics. After a year I came to Cleveland and opened an office on Archwood Avenue. Then, in 1925, I was married to Mr. HOWARD UNDERHILL COWELL.

Now, after thirty years, I am writing this epistle and living at 1546 Arthur Avenue, Lakewood, Ohio. My joints are beginning to creak and my girdle may not have the same old snap, but I'm still going strong!

P. S. by Lydia Meyer -- She was an inspiration to all of the "Young Fry" of her day.

ELLA HORN OLDHAM. I was the third child born to Lydia Erf and August Horn, August 30, 1886, in the wee little house located on Sand Hill Road, Lyme Township, Huron County. Dr. Kreider again was the official stork. At two years of age we moved to the big house on the four corner of the Main Road, which is now known as Route 20.

I was raised a normal country girl, went to Lyme Township School until I was fifteen years old, then went to Monroeville High School via street car and when weather was nice, brother Louis and I used to take the old grey mare and haul milk to Monroeville Creamery. We would park the horse and buggy at the Creamery during the day while we went to school and drive home at night. I was graduated from Monroeville School, June 10, 1904. Then remained at home until September, 1909, when I entered training school for nurses at Providence Hospital, Sandusky, Ohio. Graduated from the Hospital May 12, 1912; did private duty nursing at Sandusky until April 1913, when my room mate, Alma Schiller and I took a four-month post graduate course at Cook County Hospital, Chicago, Illinois. And then, having the wander-lust feeling to see the West, we left for Portland, Oregon, where we did private duty nursing until 1917. I came back home, did Public Health Nursing in the City of Cleveland.

In January, 1918, I joined the Army Nurse Corp and was sent to Camp Grant, Rockford, Illinois, to a Base Hospital where I spent nine months and we were taught to drill and sing while we were an outfit of the Red Cross in our Army uniform. One morning we were marched secretly to the English Steamship, Olympic, all aboard for parts unknown. There were 8,000 to be convoyed across seas and after seven days we landed at Southampton, England.

Many were down with influenza, and those that were too sick to be sent to American bases were sent to English Hospital where we were held for a month to take care of our boys under very difficult conditions. One thousand died and all were buried at Winchester, England.

Again, on the move, we crossed the English Channel for Le Havre, France, then were sent to Le Mans, France, where we opened Base Hospital 85. Again we were sent on. This time, my best pal, Nora Neal, from Michigan, and I, were separated. We had been together as buddies from the time we were in the Army. I was sent to Camp Hospital 11, St. Nazaire, where I remained until the Armistice, and was relieved for home.

We sailed on the Dutch steamship Rotterdam. Convoyed fifty-seven war brides home. Many were sick and pregnant.

Arrived home July 4, 1919, and had to get in the harness to make my own living. Sister Dora and I opened a Maternity Hospital at Hamilton, Ontario, for one year we were busy and gained lots of experience, but was able to sell out and left for Conneaut, Ohio, where we helped the stork usher in our new Nephew, Charles Horn Marcy. In due time was on my way again. Had a call to go to Kentucky when I was offered a position as City and School Nurse in Conneaut, Ohio. After three years a wander-lust headed me back to the West Coast. Another nurse pal, Mabel Wiseman and I bought a Ford and on our way visited all points of interest, such as Pike's Peak, Colorado Springs, Grand Canyon, Petrified Forest, Painted Desert, and from one end of California to the other. Took in Yosemite National Park.

Finally landed at Redmond, Oregon, where brother Louis Horn lived. Stayed with him and family for several weeks and was looking for job to go to work. Finally, we were sent to Coquille, Oregon, which is a lumbering district, located in the heart of the mountains on the Pacific Ocean, where we did County Health Nursing for five years. LOUIS ERF I, the second son of Philip and Dorothea (nee) (Heyman) Erf, was born on July 28, 1866, in the log cabin located on their farm in Peru Township, about two miles south of Monroeville. His early education was obtained in the little red school house at Standardsburg. He attended Monroeville High School for two years, after which he and his brother were associated with their father on his farm.

In the year 1893 he took Horace Greely's suggestion to "Go West Young Man, Go West." He started with his hopes high, to seek his fortune in the West, spending some of his time in the wheat fields of our great Middle West. Finally, he reached California where he found that all was not gold. After many business adventures failed, he wrote to his father for money to return home, where he received a hearty welcome from all his family.

After this adventure he worked with his father on the farm, taking over the entire responsibility after his father's death.

In 1897 he married ELIZABETH HENNINGER. To this marriage five children were born.

He is employed at the National Malleable and Steel Casting Company in the Chemistry Department as a Technician in the sand laboratory.

Since the illness of his sister Dorothy, who is confined to a wheel chair with Multiple Schlerosis, he is to be commended on his faithfulness to her and the kind and loving way in which he has looked after her for many years. OSCAR (HYMAN) ERF was a descendant of Johannette Boehler Hyman and her daughter Dorothea (Boehler) Hyman Erf and Philip Erf. He was the youngest son, born December 17, 1874; died April 28, 1947. He lived on the home place on Road 99, south of Monroeville. He graduated from Monroeville High School. He attended Monroeville Evangelical Church. He received his Bachelor of Science Degree from O.S.U. in 1899. He worked his way through college. He specialized in dairying. There was very little at O.S.U. in this field. Before teaching at O.S.U., he served in University of Illinois and Kansas State Colleges as Professor in Dairying and Animal Husbandry.

Oscar organized twenty-four Milk Associations in Indiana, Kentucky, and Ohio. He helped develop the Creameria de Mard of Cuba. In 1903 he attended Von Behring Institute in Germany. He was a founder of the Alpha Zeta Agriculture Fraternity. A quote from O.S.U. board of Trustees: "Professor Erf was a pioneer in believing chronic diseases could be attacked through supplementation of the diet with some of trace mineral or their application to the soils as fertilizers. This was at the turn of the century.

Other men worked along these lines. J. F. Wischhausen, Dr. Irene Levis, Dr. Francis M. Pottenger, Jr., the Randleigh Farms, Lockport, New York. It was discovered that prolonged periods of lactation in animals showed evidences of serious malnutrition such as very soft bones, weakling calves. The suggested feeding by Erf, when herds appeared with such, was a mineral mixture, cut green feed and sprouted corn. This saved the calves and made healthy cattle. This idea was carried over into treatment of people. The soil was given minerals and plants growing in it would have the mineral. Cobalt deficiency in food was shown up. The story of the "Miracle in the Ozarks" is a vindication of dairyman's friend, Oscar Erf.

Through the years Erf developed new methods of silage preservation and green alfalfa and grass, sprouting of grains and dehydration of hay, all aimed to keep the "green factor". He also noted iodine and manganese deficiencies. Erf was able to get a sympathetic ear from friends such as Ernest Scott, Professor of Pathology at O.S.U. Medical College and Dr. Johnathan Forman, leading evangelist for more good food from good soil. Erf had established that milk cows not receiving any green materials eventually would not breed and herds would degenerate.

Oscar Erf was a tall, dark-haired, slow, soft-spoken man. June 28, 1905 he married ALICE (KNOLL) ASHTON, second daughter of William and Emily (Boehler) Knoll Ashton, who live on Peru Center Road at River Bend, south of Monroeville. They were cousins. Oscar and Alice Erf had one child, DR. LOWELL ASHTON ERF was born March 3, 1909. Alice died, December 28, 1914, of cancer.

Oscar remarried, years afterward, having maintained a home for himself and Lowell with the help of housekeepers. NORA PECK, his efficient secretary for years, originally from Charlestown, Ohio, became his second wife. She died April 1, 1931, not many years after her marriage to Erf.

He died April 28, 1947 while Emeritus Professor, serving O.S.U. from 1907 to 1940. Buried at Riverside, Monroeville, Ohio. Much more interesting material might be written.

ALICE (KNOLL) ASHTON ERF was born December 3, 1876 and died December 28, 1914. She was the second daughter of William T. Ashton and Emily (Boehler) Knoll Ashton. She went to the red school house near their farm, "Riverbend"

(now owned by Dr. Sparks) but graduated from Monroeville High School. She and her sisters drove a white horse, "Winnie" to Monroeville School. They also stayed many times with their Aunt, Mrs. Lizetta Pimmel, who ran a store in Monroeville. Alice was a well-built, attractive woman. She was a capable person. She has two sisters, Clara and Myrtle. She married Oscar Erf, June 28, 1905. Their one child is DR. LOWELL ERF, of Philadelphia. Alice died of a cancer and was buried at Riverside, Monroeville.

WILLIAM HORN of Monroeville; CHARLES HORN in Topeka; (Baptized in German. They used the last name or middle name of Christian names, as his name, as Philip Carl Wilhelm Horn ((see family register)). He was born May 10, 1849, at Cincinnati, in a sort of hotel. His parents, Wilhelm Horn and Margaretha Boehler Horn having just arrived from Europe. He was nearly a "ship baby", meaning, his mother was pregnant when they decided to leave her people in Europe and sail on a very crude and slow boat with inadequate food and other facilities. It generally took several months to arrive at destination. She had two children die in Germany of cholera.

They left the other Boehlers at Cincinnati, having waited to receive a letter to learn where his father's brother Philip Horn was, in America. After, by river boat, going to St. Louis to Philip's--both decided to return to Ohio to join Margaretha's brother Philip Boehler, and sister Elizabeth Boehler Knoll.

William Horn was educated at the church school at Pontiac in German, and at another school near ninety-nine and the Horn Road. He attended grade school in Monroeville, Ohio. He was reared at St. Peter's Lutheran Church. His parents lie in the cemetery there.

On January 28, 1873, he married ELIZABETH HEYMAN, the second daughter and youngest child of William Contad and Maria Margaret (Opperman) Heyman. Elizabeth was born October 8, 1851, at Kaltenhotzhausen, Nassau, Germany. Elizabeth was a well-built, well-poised woman. There were no children. She died in 1915, and was buried in Topeka. She was Mrs. Horn forty-two years.

William and Elizabeth Heyman Horn began their career on a farm in Lyme Township, Huron County, Ohio, two miles north of Hunt's Corners on Sand Hill Road, opposite the home now owned by Vetus and Anna (Heiman) Herner. After three years of farming, he moved to Republic, Seneca County, and was employed by his brothers-in-law, Philip and Henry Heyman, who were lumber and stave (barrels) men at Tiffin. Later, he went into undertaking and furniture business with a Mr. Ohl as a partner. In 1885, he left Tiffin and went to Womego, Pottawatomie County, Kansas, where he engaged in ranching a few years, but in 1890 went into a partnership with Henry Schlenter to engage in the planing mill business in Topeka.

In 1892 a fire wiped his business out, with no insurance. The partnership was dissolved. He was in debt and discouraged, so he was on the verge of seeking daily employment when his mother came to his rescue with a small loan which enabled him to pay off his most pressing obligations. Although a debtor to the Bank of Topeka at the time of the fire, Mr. Horn's previous record had been one of such unquestioned business integrity that this bank, in his darkest hour of discouragement, offered him an added loan to enable him to resume his business, such was their confidence in him, a confidence that was fully verified in his subsequent business career. He purchased a workshop at 514 Van Buren Street for $1,000, paying part down and the balance in monthly installments and began with renewed determination to regain his losses. From that time his business prospered until it became the largest finishing plant in Topeka, with seventy-five men in it's employ.

He suffered another disastrous fire in 1902, in which he lost thousands of dollars, as the plant was but partly covered by insurance. Undaunted by his second misfortune, he, with firmer determination than ever, rebuilt and took as a partner A. L. Wiseman. The firm enjoyed uninterrupted prosperity until the time Mr. Horn retired from business. It manufactured sash, doors, interior and

His parents were charter members of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Pontiac, and there he was christened. He was treasurer and trustee of the Topeka Church for many years and held the office of Church Treasurer in Tiffin.

Some years after the death of his first wife, Mr. Horn was married to NELLIE FRANCES SNYDER in February, 1917. She was a widow with four children, a boy Sebastian, Frances, LaVerne and Lucile (the daughters). Mr. Horn adopted Lucile as his own in 1918.

Although Mr. Horn was retired from the lumber business he maintained many interests. He was a director and stock holder in the Kansas Reserve State Bank of Topeka. He was an organizer, director and officer in the Elmhurst Investment Company, and the Orlando Petroleum Company, for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Horn enjoyed traveling. They would spend their winters in Hawaii, Florida, or California. Although they retained their legal residence in Kansas, they also had a home in Long Beach, California. In time, Mr. Horn accumulated many properties in California.

Charles William Horn died August 28, 1927 in California, but was returned to Topeka to be buried in his family vault.

MARIA MARGARETHA HORN

EMMA DOROTHEA HORN OHLEMACHER, was the eldest daughter of Margaretha Boehler Horn and Philip Wilhelm Horn, born October 3, 1852 at Lyme Township, Huron County, and died October 7, 1917. Emma married CARL HENRY OHLEMACHER on December 25, 1872. Charles (Carl) Ohlemacher was born in Nassau, Germany at Burgschwalbach. Carl was not very hardy and died in Cleveland April 14, 1886, leaving Emma with 2 children deaf and dumb and one other, Louise. To Emma much credit must be given--as she mustered ambition and courage and moved away from her relatives to Columbus, where the children could get special education which they needed. They needed every kind of help which she could give. Louise, the eldest daughter had to help so Ida and Albert could become able to be self-sustaining and independent. All this time Emma had to be firm to make these handicapped children not depend on others. She really lived her life to make them a success. Louise who was average was not given as much attention or as many opportunities. Emma placed Albert in several schools, including the Galluadett College at Washington D.C. Both lived a useful, normal and successful life.

ROBERT DALE (HORN) ANDERSON born September 10, 1953.

I, DORA HORN COWELL, was born in Lyme Township on January 20, 1883, on Sandhill Road in a little house just north of the railroad tracks. This old farm house had a natural setting next to an old apple orchard and flanked by three lilac bushes and three sweet cherry trees at the edge of the road. I am the oldest child of August and Lydia Erf Horn. My brother Louis and sister Ella were also born there. We had an ordinary child's life, romping in the orchard where grazed a flock of sheep, and climbing trees was our everyday activity, and activity was our make-up.

In a few years we moved to the house on the corner of Sandhill Road and Route 20. Our sister Mabel was born there. The Lyme Township schoolhouse where we started to school is about one-fourth of a mile from our house. In those days, the school teacher always roomed and boarded in the neighborhood. The teacher was living at our house, and Mother, being pretty busy with four children, two hired men, and a school teacher, started me to school at the early age of four years. I often wonder how that teacher survived with all her different grades of pupils and me!

The climax came rather suddenly of my entrance to school. We were playing in the shop and I had climbed up and found a can of green paint, which suddenly spilled and went all over Ella's head and her dress. Momma had a time cleaning her up. So I went to school the next day.

Living so close to school, we came home at noon for dinner, and we sure were envious of the other children who carried their dinner buckets. We missed out on some of the noonday playing. We were happy when it rained for then we carried our lunch to school that day.

Even in those days we had our little feuds. There was quite a little colony of English people on the Sandhill Road. The two families of Shermans and Normans. They were a prolific lot with plenty of children, and there were two families of Dutchies as they called us, the Erf girls and us. Our roads were very sandy, and many a time after school at night the Dutchies dumped the Englishmen into the sandy road, especially after a rain!

Now at this stage of my life, in this year of 1955, we are all intermarried with those English!

At the age of fourteen I started to high school in Monroeville. The first two years I walked to the railroad track, and then rode Louis's bicycle on the side of the tracks to town. About a mile from our place would be waiting Harold Williams, and away we would go. Harold was tall and had a high geared bicycle, and his long legs just leisurely moved along while I had to peddle like fury to keep up with him! The last two years of our school life we rode the Lake Shore Electric Streetcar. It was built right beside the other tracks, and we sure enjoyed those rides. It is now out of existence.

After graduating from High School, I had a desire to become a trained nurse, but Grandma tabboed it, so our distant cousin, Dr. Ed Crecelious, talked about medicine. I was all for it. And somehow, he convinced my folks and Grandma it was all right. So, in the fall of 1902 Dad and I with my trunk in the spring wagon, went to Monroeville and I boarded the train and went to far away Cleveland to go to Medical College. I went to the Cleveland Homeopathic Medical College. The day I arrived, Ed was with me, and he met one of his class-mates who also had brought a girl to college. So they introduced us and found a room for us, and we were roommates. Many a time I cried myself to sleep for I was homesick. We lived together that year.

There were five girls in our class, which in those days were quite a lot. Myra Herrick, a trained nurse and sixteen years older than I, was in our class. I was attracted to her, and when, at the end of the first year she asked me to live with her, I jumped at the chance. My Mother met her and was so pleased, because she had an idea that Herrick would always protect me. One of the other girls, Jessie Peterson, Herrick, and I had three happy years of living together while going to college.

Ten days before graduation in 1906, Momma passed away. Then six weeks later, I took the State Board examination, and passed! In September I went to Philadelphia and interned at Womens Southern Hospital for a year. Jessie Peterson interned at Blockley Hospital in Philadelphia, so we had a wonderful year, and saw each other often. My hospital was located on Spruce Street, and our out-patients were mostly colored, in an area about five blocks to the south of Spruce Street. We had a horse ambulance and aside from going on emergencies, I also got a thrill in sitting on the front seat beside the driver and clanging the bell.

I came home and set up my office in Bellevue, Ohio. There were seven male M.D. 's, and myself, but I soon got acquainted and they were very helpful and nice to me.

In the year of 1917, war clouds loomed and became real. Mabel joined the Lakeside Unit, and they were the first unit to go to France. Naturally my thoughts were over there, and I was here, so I began pulling strings and wrote to Washington. Finally after a year, I got a telegram from Washington asking me to report for duty. Within ten days I dismantled my office and was on my first assignment. Women doctors were classed as Contract Surgeons, and our first assignment was to Mayo Clinic for intensive training in Anaesthesia for six weeks. Then I was sent to the Bronx in New York to U.S. Hospital No. 1. While there we gave anaesthetics for different surgeons. Dr. Peebles and I drew an assignment whereby we worked every other day. In those days we had many mastoid cases which had been operated on in camp. Those cases whose results were not good were all sent to Hospital No. 1. There two surgeons also worked every other day and operated on those bad results. The patient usually was put on his stomach and his head on a sandbag. After all the draping of sheets, the Anaesthetist had to sit on a footstool under the table and sheet, and feed the anaesthetic to him. By the time noon came we were almost asleep, and hot from being in such close quarters under that sheet.

One day the grape-vine indicated we were to be sent overseas. Such excitement! A few weeks before, Ella arrived from Camp Grant. We had a grant time going to New York and seeing the girls. The day my orders arrived I went in and told Ella I was going the next morning. Everything was to be very secret. The next morning at four-thirty, we seven female officers boarded a train and went to Pier 7, and waited and waited. About ten-thirty we boarded the ship. There we stood and watched them load four thousand troops, and finally about one-thirty we sailed -- we sailed out and passed the old Statue of Liberty and were on our way.

Our ship was small. It had been a lumber boat in the Mediterranean so was put in a convoy with thirteen other ships of the same size. We were on the water fourteen days. We were ordered at all times to carry life preservers, and our destination was Liverpool. For propaganda's sake, they would send a ship down the Mercy Canal every so often, simply to tell the English the Americans were coming. Going down the river, we were laid up for twelve hours at one bridge when they had to remove the smoke stack from the ship to allow us to go under the bridge. The English bridge was not high enough to allow an American-built ship to go beneath it. We landed at Manchester. While waiting in the station, I wrote a letter to my friend, Mrs. Salter, in Bellevue, Ohio. She was born in Manchester, England, and had a very good friend, Mrs. Gotboro, there. In order to let her know where I was, I wrote and said, "Mae, I had a notion this morning to hunt up Mrs. Gotboro and say Good Morning to her."

We traveled through England to South Hampton. There we were placed in a hotel and ordered to report every half hour. Finally, at seven o'clock that night we took the ship across the English Channel to Le Havre, France. There we stayed two days, and then proceeded to Paris where I met my sister Mabel at the railroad station! We slept on a cot that night together, and the next morning at seven o'clock she was on her way to the front.

We left Paris and went to Chaumont, and there we were placed in surgical teams. Each team was given a certain assignment. My assignment was to Rampont, American Red Cross Hospital No. 125. There were two corps boys, a nurse, a surgeon, an assistant, and myself on this team. On our way up we had to go through Suilly and stopped there for lunch, and took an ambulance the rest of the way. As I turned around to inquire where the mess hall was, I stared into the face of my cousin, Otto Faust! (See Chart II. 3). We had quite a few minutes of intensive conversation, and he inquired about Mabel. He was able to see Mabel the next day up at her base aboard a food truck. Our team had night duty all the time I was there. About three times a week we ~~would~~ get our breakfast, make up some bacon sandwiches, and hop the first truck or ambulance that came along going toward the front. In this manner we were able to go to see Verdun almost right up to the lines.

One day they said the armistice was signed. That night we nonchalantly left the shutters off the operating room windows and proceeded to work. About eleven o'clock, we heard a BRRRRR, and old Heinie was in the heavens. Like a flash, the electric engineer had turned off the lights and the boys put on the shutters, and then the lights went on and we continued to operate. Two days later the true armistice was signed. Then instead of wounded boys the pneumonia cases began to come down on us. After about two weeks we were sent back to Chaumont for further assignment.

I was assigned to Beaunne in the southern part of France. During my assignment there I was given a furlough of two weeks, and I met Ella in Paris and we went down to Nice on the Mediterranean. I sort of crabbed the act as I got the flu, so I was in the hospital for part of the time.

Then my next assignment was Coblenz, Germany, in the Third Army Laboratories.

In May I received orders to go home. So I went through Paris to Brest, remained there ten days waiting for a ship, came home on the Kaiserina Augusta, and arrived home on Decoration Day. After several months Ella and I opened up a maternity hospital in Ontario, Canada. We ran it for a year and then sold it. I went to Boston for post-graduate work in pediatrics. After a year I came to Cleveland and opened an office on Archwood Avenue. Then, in 1925, I was married to Mr. HOWARD UNDERHILL COWELL.

Now, after thirty years, I am writing this epistle and living at 1546 Arthur Avenue, Lakewood, Ohio. My joints are beginning to creak and my girdle may not have the same old snap, but I'm still going strong!

P. S. by Lydia Meyer -- She was an inspiration to all of the "Young Fry" of her day.

ELLA HORN OLDHAM. I was the third child born to Lydia Erf and August Horn, August 30, 1886, in the wee little house located on Sand Hill Road, Lyme Township, Huron County. Dr. Ireider again was the official stork. Attwo years of age we moved to the big house on the four corner of the Main Road, which is now known as Route 20.

I was raised a normal country girl, went to Lyme Township School until I was fifteen years old, then went to Monroeville High School via street car and when weather was nice, brother Louis and I used to take the old grey mare and haul milk to Monroeville Creamery. We would park the horse and buggy at the Creamery during the day while we went to school and drive home at night. I was graduated from Monroeville School, June 10, 1904. Then remained at home until September, 1909, when I entered training school for nurses at Providence Hospital, Sandusky, Ohio. Graduated from the Hospital May 12, 1912; did private duty nursing at Sandusky until April 1913, when my room mate, Alma Schiller and I took a four-month post graduate course at Cook County Hospital, Chicago, Illinois. And then, having the wonder-lust feeling to see the West, we left for Portland, Oregon, where we did private duty nursing until 1917. I came back home, did Public Health Nursing in the City of Cleveland.

In January, 1918, I joined the Army Nurse Corp and was sent to Camp Grant, Rockford, Illinois, to a Base Hospital where I spent nine months and we were taught to drill and sing while we were an outfit of the Red Cross in our Army uniform. One morning we were marched secretly to the English Steamship, Olympic, all aboard for parts unknown. There were 8,000 to be convoyed across seas and after seven days we landed at Southhampton, England.

Many were down with influenza, and those that were too sick to be sent to American bases were sent to English Hospital where we were held for a month to take care of our boys under very difficult conditions. One thousand died and all were buried at Winchester, England.

Again, on the move, we crossed the English Channel for Le Havre, France, then were sent to Le Mans, France, where we opened Base Hospital 85. Again we were sent on. This time, my best pal, Nora Neal, from Michigan, and I, were separated. We had been together as buddies from the time we were in the Army. I was sent to Camp Hospital 11, St. Nazaire, where I remained until the Armistice, and was relieved for home.

We sailed on the Dutch steamship Rotterdam. Convoyed fifty-seven war brides home. Many were sick and pregnant.

Arrived home July 4, 1919, and had to get in the harness to make my own living. Sister Dora and I opened a Maternity Hospital at Hamilton, Ontario, for one year we were busy and gained lots of experience, but was able to sell out and left for Conneaut, Ohio, where we helped the stork usher in our new Nephew, Charles Horn Marcy. In due time was on my way again. Had a call to go to Kentucky when I was offered a position as City and School Nurse in Conneaut, Ohio. After three years a wander-lust headed me back to the West Coast. Another nurse pal, Label Eisaman and I bought a Ford and on our way visited all points of interest, such as Pike's Peak, Colorado Springs, Grand Canyon, Petrified Forest, Painted Desert, and from one end of California to the other. Took in Yosemite National Park.

Finally landed at Redmond, Oregon, where brother Louis Horn lived. Stayed with him and family for several weeks and was looking for job to go to work. Finally, we were sent to Coquille, Oregon, which is a lumbering district, located in the heart of the mountains on the Pacific Ocean, where we did County Health Nursing for five years. We pioneered the work out there, and surely had lots of experience. Some of the places we had to ride logging trains and boats, and often were caught in the low tide and had to wait for high tide to go on. Drove our Fords over mountain roads where many were afraid to go. Made many nice friends and really called it my second home. In 1926, came back home and still having itchy feet wanted to see Florida. Spent four months, then came back to Cleveland and did Industrial Nursing at Ohio Steel Company for several years. And during that time met BENJAMIN OLDHAM. Was married, November 28, 1929, and from then on my job has been housewife, up to date.

In Mabel's division there were undertakers. HUGH MARCY was one and this is where they first met. Hugh was hurt in the war. PHILIP WILHELM (SEIBEL) BOEHLER called WILLIAM, eldest son of J. Philip Bohler I, was born in Lyme Township, Huron County Ohio, December 29, 1852. He was educated in a school on the corner of Horn Rd., and at St. Peter's Lutheran Parochial School at Pontiac. Rev. Schmogrow was the teacher as well as the parson. Rev. Schmogrow was well educated at University of Berlin, being one of the refugees of 1848 also. He tried to do much for the generation of Protestant German Americans which settled and were born in this area such as Horns, Knolls, Schelds, Scheids, Schilds, Linders, etc. Rev. Schmogrow was the main guiding light of all the Bohler children.

William was a kindly and helpful husband and father. He farmed his fathers farm adjacent to his fathers homestead on Bohler Rd., and eventually he became the owner. William Boehlers were prominent members of the St. Peter's Lutheran Church of Pontiac and later at Trinity of Monroeville. He was a Democrat and served as trustee and other capacities in the township. His life was one of continuous activities in which he was accorded due recognition of honest labor. He was substantial and prosperous representative of his native county. About 1908 he moved from his farm to Monroeville, Ohio to the second house west of the bakery on W. Main St.--next to Dr. Hindley. He purchased it a few years earlier. He lived there until his death.

William Bohler married MARY MOHR HEYMAN January 4, 1877. She was the eldest child of Wm. Anton and Jeanette Mohr Heyman and was a sister of Charles Heyman who married William's sister, Louise Bohler. Mary was born June 25, 1854 in Lyme Township. To this couple were born eight children. Elmer, the youngest, was born in 1894 and died at four months. All the rest grew to adulthood--however several died very young as 21, 27, 28, and 33 from typhoid fever, childbirth, goiter, etc.

Mary attended the district school in Sherman Township and worked with her mother until her marriage. She was baptized and a member of the Zoar Reformed Church, Hunts Corners. She later joined the Lutheran Church with her husband. She was jovial and a bit plump. She had bright snappy black eyes. Mary died at Lakeside Hospital, Cleveland, August 4, 1911.

Second wife--MRS. CAROLINE STROHMIER LEHNERT born December 8, 1861 in Erie County and died July 31, 1932.

William was a devoted husband and could hardly bear the passing of Mary--so to compensate he married at Lutheran Church, Clyde, Ohio, Mrs. Lehnert, in 1914. She had several grown children at the time. It seemed as most second marriages a convenient arrangement and acceptable. Mr. Bohler died April 24, 1924. Mrs. Caroline Bohler died July 31, 1932.

LOUISA WILHELMINA BOEHLER SCHEID eldest child of William Bohler and Mary (Mohr) Heyman--born March 14, 1878 on a farm on Bohler Road. Educated in the Red Brick School near their home and at the Church School. On October 21, 1896 she married Charles H. Scheid (see below). They lived on his father's farm until it became his and later his son Donald. This family had four lovely girls and finally a boy. They used a surrey and horses as they would go visiting. They also had pea fowls which were a novelty for many. Louise died October 28, 1938.

CHARLES A. SCHEID born February 19, 1867 in Sherman Township. His parents Jacob and Barbara (Bellstein) Schaid who were natives of Germany. His brothers and sisters were Emma, Henry, Minnie, George, John, Fred, and Albert. Attended school until 12 years, and from then was a farmer. On October 21, 1897 he married Louisa Bohler, oldest daughter of William and Mary Heyman Bohler. They bought the farm he lived on in 1906. Mr. Scheid, a Republican, was also a Lutheran. He died February 5, 1946.

MABEL LUELLA (BOEHLER) SCHEID GRAYHAM eldest daughter of Louisa and Charles Scheid born September 6, 1897 on their farm not far from Hunts Corners. Graduated from Monroeville High School and later, Huron County Normal, in 1918; Summer School at Bowling Green, but graduated from Ashland College. She taught in Huron County Schools and in Garfield Heights and grade school in Cleveland.

On October 8, 1927 she married EDSALL G. GRAYHAM.

EDSALL G. GRAYHAM who was born January 4, 1896, was the son of Henry and Grace (Ryerson) Grayham of North Fairfield, Ohio. This couple settled on a farm at North Fairfield but Mabel became ill (anemia) within a year and died July 19, 1928. Mabel was a member of Lutheran Church. She always seemed a picture of health.

AMANDA LISETTA BOEHLER MAYER fourth daughter of William and Mary Heyman Boehler was born January 7, 1886 on her father's farm on Boehler Road near Pontiac. Amanda was an active, lively, healthy girl - full of fun. She had the district school education and trained at St. Peter's Lutheran Church. She was married, February 26, 1908, to HENRY DANIEL MAYER of River Road, Monroeville. The River Road community enjoyed her pleasant personality. Finally this couple were expecting a child; Amanda was not supervised by Doctor Pilkey, as later the doctors did, so she became very heavy and when her son was born she died. It was an upset to many relatives and friends. Cletus, her son, was a fat baby. She died July 21, 1913 of childbirth. She is buried at Riverside. Cletus was reared by his aunt and uncle, Mr. & Mrs. Philip Stecker (a neighbor). Henry D. Mayer, her husband, is a brother of Anna, wife of brother August. He is the son of Henry Daniel and Phillibina Mueller Mayer. Henry lived and worked the Henry Mayer farm which was formerly the Clary farm. This farm has a very beautifully designed house built by the New England architect brought into this "Fireland" area.

After Amanda's death Henry remained a widower for 16 years and then on March 19, 1932 he married AMANDA E. STOTZ. We think he liked the name Amanda. He built a new house and moved into Monroeville at 73 Baker St., after Cletus married. Amanda died in April 1957.

CLETUS WILLARD MAYER, born July 21, 1913. His mother died at his birth, so his father's sister, Amelia Mayer Stecker and her family took this baby and reared him. They lived next neighbor to his father Henry. Of course Henry was there everyday also.

Cletus graduated from high school and learned farming from his father.

The first step in the process of the investigation is the selection of the material to be studied. This is done by the investigator, who chooses the material which he believes will be most helpful in the study of the problem. The selection of the material is a very important step, and it is one which must be given the most careful consideration.

PHILIP HEINRICH BOEHLER called HENRY BOEHLER, born September 7, 1854, was the second son of J. Philip Boehler and Margaretha Seible, formerly of Germany. Education came from St. Peter's Lutheran Parochial School and Church under Pastor William Schmogrow, the pastor of this church for many years. Philip Heinrich was baptized in German but called HENRY. In German the second name is used, the first name often identifies his fatherhood. Henry Boehler was numbered among the progressive and prominent representatives of agriculture pursuits in Lyme Township, Huron County.

In 1877 he started farming on his father's farm in Lyme Township, Huron County. He later was the owner. Henry was successful, diligent and persevering. On January 4, 1877 he married MISS LOUISE SEEL HORN daughter of Philip and Katherine Seel Horn. (Henry and his brother Otto married sisters Louise and Emma Horn). Henry was helpful in his Church--Lutheran. In education, he believed in good schools for his children. So he and William Erf and few other kinfolks agreed to make a better school than the average Red Township School, prevalent at that time. So these men established a two year High School at Lyme, and called it Lyme Special--a country school. It was while he was on the School Board that Lyme Special was established. He also was a trustee of the Township of Lyme for 35 years. During that time MacAdam Roads were made in Lyme Township and Route 20. He supervised the building of MacAdam Road for the State on Route 20 in the early days. Henry was concerned about his kin. If any emergency arose he stepped in to help. He supervised children and acted as guardian. He had opinions and often expressed them. He left the chips fall where they would.

He had four children, SARAH, wife of William Korndorfer, ALBERT, CLARA SCHUG, and EMMA STAFF.

Henry was a staunch Democrat. He served in various local political offices. He was devoted to public welfare. He justly deserves to have been rated a foremost place among the citizens of his township for his aggressiveness as a business man of keen discrimination laboring to promote the general welfare as well as individual success.

Henry died February 22, 1931 at his home in Bellevue on Northwest Street, having lived a full life--77 years old.

His wife Louise Seel Horn is daughter of Philip and Katherine Seel Horn--both natives of Germany; Philip Horn is a brother of Wilhelm Horn, and uncle of Henry Boehler, as well as Louise.

Louise died October 30, 1949 at the age of 92. She was a kindly woman and devout Christian.

MARIA WILHELMINA BOEHLER MEYER (for short, Minnie or Mina) was born December 30, 1857, in Peru Township, Huron County. She was the third child of pioneer farm parents, Johann Philip Boehler and Margaretha Seibel. She was baptized in 1858. On May 29, 1870 she was confirmed in St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran Church, at Pontiac.

She grew as a country child of the early nineteenth century would, having two brothers near her age as playmates. But there was little time for play. She often helped work in the fields, only to go to the house to help her mother with cooking, churning, sewing, and cleaning.

One time her father bought William and Henry each gold watches as a type of bonus, or appreciation. She felt unjustly treated, as she worked by their side, and after meals helped in the house, and she said so! It wasn't long until her father saw the point. He bought her a lovely gold necklace, which is in the family yet. Her schooling was whatever the Lutheran Church School could give. A Rev. Schmogrow, a Berlin University man, was the teacher, and was unusually well educated. At a very young age her responsibility was to make work clothes for the men in the family, as ready-made overalls were not available.

At the age of twenty-two, she married JOHN P. MEYER, March 25, 1879. She became a member of the Evangelical Church at Monroeville upon her marriage to John. There were five children: Otto, Albert, Oscar, Clarence, and Lydia.

When one ponders and realizes the work done by Minnie, the feeding of her large family, hired men and many guests, not to mention the cleaning and house-keeping needed in a fifteen-room house, one wonders how she did it! She endeavored to aid in church work, always giving a hand to many families in Monroeville, whose men folks often helped with farm work, and others who were less fortunate. She had hired girls, sometimes.

Apple butter making (made from sweet apples and sweet cider)--thirty gallons at a time in a big copper kettle; sewing bees, where they made rag strips for carpet weaving; and quilting bees, where comforts were made--these were gatherings of women, relatives, neighbors, or church associates. The top and bottom of the comforts would be made of patches--remnants of dress goods--sewed together in certain patterns or designs. Between these would be placed wool, which had been raised on the farms. This wool had to be washed, cleaned, combed, and carded. The last two operations were done by someone near Milan. These gatherings were social affairs. A good meal was prepared with the choicest of homemade bread, sausages, jams, salads, desserts, and coffee.

Another custom was the special dinner honoring a child's confirmation at church. Relatives, minister and family, and God Parents were usually the guests. In those days children would have to wait until the adults had their meal--if more were there than the table could accommodate. But, at this event the confirmant could sit at the first table with the adults, which gave importance to the event, for him. A special blessing was made for him at the table.

It seems the amount of work done by the farm women of this period was unbelievable. There were few labor-saving devices. Minnie had a mechanically-minded husband, John, who built a steam furnace, before 1900, also a bath room and tub--no toilet inside, but a sink where water ran out. He arranged a washing machine with a gasoline engine. This helped, but many times these improvements became sentimental and did not function properly. Their farm home was much above the average for that particular time.

Minnie had pride, ambition, and generosity. Generosity with herself as well as things. Many town families with many children enjoyed a day's outing at the farm, taking home with them baskets of apples, eggs, meat, and whatever was in season.

Upon the death of Albert, who left a widow with five children, Minnie constantly supplied essential needs for this family. The house was provided for at an earlier time by her and John.

Minnie enjoyed a good time, and her companions in many affairs were Amalia Richards, Lizetta Pimmel, Minnie Erf, Mrs. Charles Stotz, Louisa Seel, Rose Meyer, and other kith and kin. Also the townspeople: Mr. and Mrs. Gust Hess, the Hiltzes, Tylers, Hohlers, and many others.

Minnie was generally a strong, healthy, and industrious woman, weighing at times one hundred and sixty to one hundred and seventy-five pounds. She was eager to assume her duties. She did many things the best way she knew. With limited education it was not always understood. With her children, she was too kindly at times, giving in to them when she might have been strict, and at other times, too severe. She was trained for an agricultural age and had to rear her children in an approaching industrial age. She had to adjust from European ways of her parents to the American way. These were conflicting ideas. She taught ideals and wanted her children to be fine. In 1920, she moved from the farm to Monroeville, at 51 S. Main Street. She lived there four months. She had a "stroke" and died, December 11, 1920. Interment was at the family lot, at Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio.

JOHN PHILIP MEYER, only son of J. George and Lena Koehler Meyer, was born December 12, 1858, in Ridgefield Township and received a common school education. His first knowledge of agriculture was received on the same farm on which he resided. From early youth he evidenced a natural mechanical gift and though specializing in farming, was capable of executing work in iron and wood, requiring no small amount of skill.

He invented the crooked wheel on the sulky plow, later used by plow companies. He was asked to work for these companies as an inventor, or technician. This he refused. He also invented a cultivator, drag, potatoe planter, and corn planter. At the time of his death he was working on a corn picker and many men from various implement companies had come to him. He did not have it perfected when he died. He was eager to make work a less difficult task with the help of power and machinery.

In his youth, his mother--Lena Kohler, of Berne, Switzerland--who was an unusually well educated and refined woman, devoted much time and attention to his training. Mrs. Meyer, (his mother), had one of the first pianos, and John learned to play the piano and organ, as well as violin and cornet. He played the popular tunes, square dance tunes, as well as the classical and sacred. Wherever he was, music was in order, and his friends had many good times. He played in church for the choir for years and almost married a Miss Hass, a member of the choir. He enjoyed the Polka, Schottish, Gallup, and Waltzes. He played cornet in Monroeville band at one time. There never was a day passed that he did not play on the organ or piano or violin. Before meals he usually played, to relax and wait for serving. On the evening before his death, he played the piano go get out of the confusion as the other members of the family were preparing to go out for the evening.

On March 25, 1879, he married MARIA WILHELMINA BOEHLER, daughter of Philip Boehler. To this union five children were born:

	Born	Died
Otto John	March 23, 1881	November 23, 1933
Albert Henry	January 30, 1884	January 23, 1916
Oscar Philip	May 13, 1890	February 28, 1943
Clarence George	August 28, 1892	July 9, 1946
Lydia Louise	April 18, 1896

They went to housekeeping at what is now Meyerling, with John's parents. But after two years Mrs. John, who had been promised a new house and since she was a daughter of well-to-do Philip Boehler, would not continue without a separate home. So, John moved, for a short time, across the road from Hoffackers-- or north of Gertie Willey's farm near Blodget's Corner on Sowalt Road. Then John and parents got busy and built where the family lived for nearly seventy-five years, across from Meyerling.

Minnie owned what was known as the Ruggles farm in Webb Settlement. However, John and Minnie felt all the farms were theirs together.

John seldom offended people. He was not a good disciplinarian. He thought children would just grow into good habits. Difficult tasks were always eased by hiring help. He was always a busy, thinking man. He was a believer in farmers' organizations. He watched the markets daily and felt there should not be the fluctuation. He usually sold his grain close to top prices. He believed in planting and harvesting according to a certain almanac. His yields were high, and quality good. He harvested on time and hired men to hasten the job.

He was a great admirer of William Jennings Bryan. He read and reread his philosophy and speeches ardently. He felt Bryan was a great leader. John did not seek public offices. He was a member of Immanuel Evangelical Church, and for years its president, and it was increasing in membership when he died, in 1914. Karl Roth was the pastor. Many trips were made and meetings held to promote the church. Many ministers were entertained over night in his home; trial ministers, substitute ministers, and ministers' families.

He died quietly in his bed, at eleven p.m., May 8, 1914, of apoplexy, at the age of fifty-eight. He is buried in Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio.

They have three children: KAREN SUE, October 21, 1945, GARY DONALD, January 2, 1947, and DALE WILLIAM, August 29, 1949.

Donald has done building--doing all operations. He is doing trucking with his own truck. He works hard. He lives in a new house which he built himself on Castalia Road. He is of average build, and good-looking. He seems to be willing to work and plan to become economically independent.

CLARENCE GEORGE MEYER, fourth son of John P. and Wilhelmina Boehler Meyer, was born August 28, 1892. He was baptized and confirmed in the Evangelical Church in Monroeville, Ohio.

He went to high school one year, then attended the Norwalk Business College with excellent records. He lived on the home place as a farmer until about 1931. Later, he worked fifteen years for the Standard Oil Company.

Clarence, at one time, had the nick-name of "Preacher" and later "Lefty." He was generous, kindly, and level-headed. Witty, with homespun philosophy. As a young man he did much in helping to remodel the Evangelical Church. He always tried to be the compromiser in any difficulty. He was so very timid! He lacked confidence in himself. He was well liked by his coworkers and his employer. As a young man he was a church treasurer and was a clean chap. He did many kind things for his family. He should have had more schooling, as he could have gone far.

He married at the age of forty-two--HELEN FABIAN of Chicago, on November 24, 1934. One daughter, SUSAN LYDIA, was born to them, on February 21, 1936. They lived on Walnut Street, in Norwalk, Ohio. Susan attended summer camps and graduated from Norwalk High School in 1954. She is going to Ohio State University and taking a course in nursing.

He died, July 9, 1946, at the age of fifty-four, of a heart occlusion. He was buried at Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio. His wife later married Stephen Mullinex, of Norwalk, Ohio, in 1949.

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of writing my autobiography has been several-fold. First, some of my relatives wanted it. Second, I want parents and young folks to realize that both, today, are not much different from what they were fifty years ago--or longer. I, too, "had a difficult time raising my parents." They did not see eye to eye with me. I saw the world ahead. They seemed to believe I should do as they had learned. Parents sometimes are not so careful as they should be about personal appearance, actions, language, and habits. I remember I was embarrassed when I went shopping, for mother spoke German. I didn't want people to think we were immigrants, for we were not. I'd tell her to speak English; that we were American. Of course my attitude toward that, now, would be quite different, and I would be glad for an opportunity to learn to speak another language.

They lived for a different period; the pioneer period. Land was what their parents revered, because of its scarcity in Europe for the common people, so it was the thing of value. It is good today, but not alone good. They didn't see the commercial age. An age with competition was coming, and training was needed for it. Their intentions were good, as are those of most parents.

Children today are no different from those in the past. If you parents don't think so, just look back. Children are idealists at certain ages. They are thoughtless and cruel because they have not been taught to be thoughtful and kind. Many of the things parents complain about are due to the fact that they did not teach those qualities they expected. Social sanction is a powerful way to teach, if done by other children. Children have injustices and heartaches today, and they did when you were children. The bravado had his inferiority complex and he knew it. Many times he was timid and he felt incapable and inadequate just as they do today. Drink stimulated him, gave him ideas of adequacy and courage, as it still does today. A good example is the great silent helper to youth. They are "way showers," Parents--yes--all of us, have a job.

This is not only the autobiography of Lydia Meyer, but a story of the career (professional and business) women between 1900 and 1950 (roughly). Many women create this type of life; noticeable in the cities more so than in small towns. They create a pleasant home with some one who needs a home too. Men are a part of their lives, but not seriously.

CHILDHOOD

One sunny April day on my parents' farm near Monroeville, Ohio, in 1896 (April 18 to be exact) I opened my eyes to behold a world wonderful and very strange. My parents already had four boys who couldn't be expected to be very much elated over the arrival of a baby sister. Sisters were likely to be a nuisance.

My mother, Mrs. John P. Meyer nee Wilhelmina Boehler, always practical, said on my arrival that she wasn't certain a girl's coming along so late in her life, made any difference since she had all boys. I never heard what Father thought; anyway, I tagged him about a great deal as a child.

And then the grandparents. Grandpa Boehler came to visit me, then hustled proudly off to tell the news to all. No phones then, and very few hospitals, so it wasn't fashionable to be born in a hospital. Grandma Meyer, living across the road at Meyerling, was a fine, capable woman and gave a helping hand, no doubt, by sending Mary Koehler who lived with her. Both grandparents died within two years; hence I don't remember them much, directly.

My childhood was full of action and experience, which today perhaps might have been called hardship. I realize that it prepared me to face problems which later in life I would meet. I grew up to be self sufficient, independent, and self reliant.

I played in my father's work shop where he made and repaired his farm tools. I, too, made my toys, carts (two or four wheels), and harnesses so I could drive our dog or pet sheep, which we always had. The mechanical work experience taught me the use of tools and how things were made which stood me in well, since as a property owner and landlord, there was so much repairing, building, and remodeling needed. At that time no one dreamed of such, but we shifted from an agricultural way of life to a mechanical and urban age. Certainly, I didn't believe in sewing doilies as girls did then.

I played mostly with my brother, Clarence, and often got into trouble, either defending myself or doing what was suggested. In either case, I didn't let him "pull punches"; but this was not often lady like and approved.

My first school was the Red Brick called "Webb Settlement," located near Ruggles Cemetery, some two miles away on Webb Settlement Road. The first grade teacher was Ella Heyman. I remember the wall reading chart and how happy Rudolf Behrens and I were to turn over each page after we mastered it. (He is now a school teacher, too.) Then the Old Baldwin Readers and Ray's Arithmetics. Pupils of every age were in this one room school. We had a bucket and dipper for all (water fountain), a pot belly stove to huddle around--baking on one side and freezing on the other (half baked). Everybody seemed busy with some kind of games at recesses and noon, such as "Fox and Geese" if there was snow; "Crack the Whip" (skinning knees); "Pussy wants a Corner" (played in woodshed on rainy days); and "Pump Pull Away" (ankle deep in mud sometimes).

What an experience walking to school was! With our dinner pails, we started out "cross lots" two or more miles. It was fun to crawl over the rail fences and jump the ditches, sometimes full of water. The wider the better, although I might have crossed where it was narrower, but that would have been less adventurous and challenging. In winter the ice would break through and that wasn't good. My brothers used to frighten me, telling that there were bears in the woods we went through, then run away fast. Indeed, they were there not too many years before--but imagination did help put them there.

In no uncertain way I was soon taught to be unafraid; to explore; to face and solve problems by myself as the boys certainly gave me training to know things were not always so bad as they seemed. After the Red School (because my parents were concerned I might get hurt, wet, or what not going crosslots) arrangements were made to go to the village school at Monroeville. This distance was two miles, also. In the spring, on my way home, where there were huge ant hills eighteen inches in diameter, I would poke them or step on them to see what happened. I pretended I was a big giant and disturbed them, feeling I was cruel. As I walked to school, I experienced all kinds of weather: beautiful, fresh and cool, crisp and bitter cold ones.

Mother dressed me in plenty of clothes for cold weather: leggings, bloomers, fur pieces, wool veil, caps, and what not. Often, before I left, she made me drink a cup of hot milk which helped keep me warm. In spite of all this--I sometimes got so cold I'd cry--and I didn't cry easily. There was a stretch on the way where the wind had such a grand cold sweep, I would think I could not make it! I would walk backwards a lot; that helped.

To Monroeville, my parents would take me by buggy, sleigh, or bob sled in extreme weather. Later, I had a bicycle for nice weather.

I often loitered on the way. I certainly knew every thing on the way home, I was what you might call a "lingering walker." I stopped to notice wild flowers and weeds. The big thistles and milk weed fascinated me. The golden rod, iron weed, mustard, and others. The cowbird, red-headed wood pecker, red winged black bird and the meadow lark are a memory I shall never forget. There was a race track on the way to school. During my high school days, we had a fine black driving horse, so I, too, got quite a thrill putting her on the track and gripping the reins--unafraid and in complete control of the horse as she spread out in front of me in a burst of speed.

There was a cider mill to pass on our way, and "sweet cider making time" I recall with nostalgia. Yet, I don't believe, had I known bacteriology then, I would have found it so appetizing. Also our apple orchard was patronized until winter as the choicest, largest apples--Baldwin, Northern Spy, Greenings, etc. which hung late at the peak of the high trees, would drop on the well-sodded mat below and be so cool and crisp when I would find them on the way home from school.

Jesse Stuart, the writer, claims that walking to school presented a challenge which in 1954 we remove from our youth. He said, "Those children who have had to walk farthest, today occupy the finest positions." They wanted and walked for an education. No law to compel it. Children need to observe, learn to work and sweat, and do things with their hands; then they will have been challenged.

As a girl with few playmates, and active, I was interested in the many small animals found along the river. There were all kinds of wild flowers and trees. As I look back, nearly everything I did, such as coasting and ice skating, helped to develop what we call today, a strong body; physically, mentally, and spiritually. Later, I assumed responsibility about our farm, i. e., milking cows, dairy processes, big yard-mowing and raking, auto or buggy washing, caring for a fifteen-room house. Each morning I had definite work that had to be done and often had to hurry on my bicycle so as not to be late to school. It seemed it was better so than today, riding the smelly bus full of bad conduct and foul ideas and language.

My favorite game in high school was basket ball. My mother and aunt did not approve, as they did not consider it "nice" to appear before crowds dressed in bloomers, with yards of material (complete coverage). Anyway, I was too big and should be more lady-like. In spite of home discouragement, I continued and was captain of the team, and as I recall, we won every game we played. We were presented with a loving cup at the annual basket ball banquet. The cup is at the high school today, and I still have a flashlight picture of the event.

Now, horse back riding and driving were my favorite sports. I just loved horses, and from about eight to fifteen years of age, I'd comb the manes and be in the manger fixing up all our ten horses. I promised not to get where they could trample me. By the day, I'd do it. Aunt Louise's horse, "Billy," was about worn out when I visited her, as I'd drive him incessantly up and down her long lane. In college, and after, I rode horses, unafraid. I wanted them with spirit! I think this is normal for a healthy outdoor girl and often when I hear parents talk about their girl, I'm on the girl's side.

I enjoyed high school. We seemed to have a very nice group of daughters of original settlers. We developed a "gang of girls,"--a type of sorority. The younger mothers were aware of our doings. We seemed to want to do the better and best things. Naming a few girls: Mildred and Ruth Heter, Merab Easton, Laura and Ruby Herner, Lela Bringer, Marie Stimson, Anna Hess, Threse Gutchalk, Pearl Lowry, Mary and Vi Simmons, Dorothy Marsh, Luetta Hettle, and I--daughters of business men and farmers who owned the land surrounding the town. In 1954, forty years later, this group are still friends and still enjoy each other's companionship. We also had boys--but only a few of the boys went to college. Nearly all the girls went for a time.

I was not always the best student--I enjoyed a good time. I had little "background," educationally speaking. Miss Elizabeth Reitz and Miss Mabel Kreider had to straighten us out, as we were mischievous. However, you must not conclude that school days were all fun--there was work, too. I could tell much more here. I did "burn midnight oil."

My family lived among people whose interest was centered in farming. Folks were proud of their land. Each child should have a farm. They owned the land and worked hard to improve and pay for it. My family had a wholesome respect for work. Each member was expected to share the family work. Honesty, integrity, self reliance, thrift, and thoroughness were nourished by our home environment.

My grandfather and grandmother Meyer were charter members of the Immanuel Evangelical Church. My father was president of it in his later years. My other grandparents were charter members of the Lutheran Church at Pontiac. Clarence and I were active members in the youth activities. Each of us children attended for nearly a year a bi-weekly class in Church, conducted by the Pastor, where many verses of the Bible were memorized. It was good! We studied catechism, a book of selected Bible verses, church history, and creeds; Bible history and characters. In my class there were, perhaps, twenty-five. I have that picture yet. Then, too, I remember the Chorus singing. How we gathered together, forty to fifty of us--to enjoy those hymns, catchy little songs, solemn heavy ones. Oh, no! we didn't sing like trained singers, but I'm sure the experience helped us later to appreciate real singing and good church music. This, I believe, should be a part of each child's training. The child isn't aware of it--but it is good.

Music was a definite part of our home life. All of us had some musical training. Although we had a sense of rhythm, tone, and tune, we didn't do much with music. We didn't practice enough. This was a disappointment to my parents. Otto and Oscar played the piano well--but dropped it in their late teens. Clarence played the coronet and father the violin and I, the piano, in a trio. We should have done better, as Father was really a good piano, organ, and violin player. Grandmother Meyer played the piano and organ, both of which we later had in our home. What fun it was to gather around the organ at home and sing songs as Father played, Mother encouraging us and helping, although untrained. We enjoyed his barn-dance music as well as hymns and folk songs, both in English and German.

I was with my father a great deal. He was a quiet man who believed as I do-- that the best fertilizer on a farm is the owner's footprints. As a child, I'd often walk with him as he visited various fields to see ditches were opened or fences fixed, or stop to pick berries. He often took me to school. I never was able to make up my mind which parent I liked better. Both were kind and soft hearted. They didn't always agree on discipline for us. Since Mother was with us longer and more, she saw our needs in discipline more readily than Father.

I was fortunate to inherit my father's ability to have original ideas, and believe I might have developed it to much greater evidence in other occupations than teaching, although one needs it there, too. Perhaps my farm gives some evidence.

Before finishing high school, my father died. It was a shock, and the first tragedy. It was a turning point. I wasn't then aware of its importance. He had done much in securing such men as Rev. Krutzenstein and Roth. They stressed youth religious training. I am grateful for it.

My father's death presented problems to me and my family. There was no idea I should ever go to college as it was a girl's place to stay home and relieve her mother. Mother, feeling so grieved over Father's death, made it a worse problem.

World War I was upon us and I helped on the farm and with various "drives," but I wanted to do more, so I left for Columbus--but soon found out one had to have more education. I returned to the farm and continued war work in the community. But I saw Dora, Ella, and Mabel Horn going places because they were trained! "Why couldn't I get training? If they could, so can I!"

In 1915-16, I decided to go to the County Normal School at Monroeville. Bess Benedict and O. C. Minnich were teachers. I did not expect to teach. But the County Superintendent came after me the next year to teach at Lyme Special, not far from home. It was a high salary, at $55.00 per month. I had planned on a trip to Washington and New York City with Anna Hess. At school my room was closed for a week when I left. All went well until January, when Mrs. Pimmel wanted me to go with her to Florida. I resigned my job, in spite of protest and disgust from the school board. Only youth would have had nerve enough to do such a thing! The next year I was offered the job in the upper grade, but with a definite understanding that I was to teach the balance of the year. This I did. This was 1917-18. By this time I could see I must go for more education. In January, 1918, I went to the Clark School of Business in Louisville, where I took up Bookkeeping, since I could be away only three months, because of work on the farm. But later in August of that year, I decided I must go to a college in September. I signed up for Osteopathic College--but our pastor, Mr. Kepple, felt I should go to Ohio Wesleyan. Of all this, Mother did not approve, but agreed she would pay one year only. However, I was able to finance the balance by borrowing from the bank.

Mother moved into a smaller house near Emma (a sister-in-law) whom Mother was helping. The farm was left in charge of Clarence. I sold my interest in Guernsey cows and felt he had his decisions to make as to what he wanted.

My mother's death, in December, 1920--two years before graduation at Ohio Wesleyan University, left me with no home and a need to meet my problems alone. It would have been easy to have given up. However, by going to summer school, I was able to finish Ohio Wesleyan University in three years, rather than the usual four.

Since my goal was medicine, I took chemistry as a major; I also knew I had to stop to earn money, so took another major--one in education. Minored in physics, biology, bacteriology and history. So many laboratory courses kept me continuously busy all day. I still found time for basket ball, hockey, riding, and baseball. I received my B. A. in 1922, and later my M. A. in 1931 from Ohio State University in geography.

My college days brought me many friends; chief among them was Mabel Haynes of near Sabina, Ohio, and she has been an intimate part of my life ever since. She, above all others, has contributed most to my well being and happiness. We have been house mates since 1921.

Clara Ashton Clark was another fine friend, although she was a relative. She understood my problems and encouraged me. She would invite me to her home during holidays when I so much needed a place to go. Have you ever experienced school vacations when everyone went home and you didn't know where to go? Clara knew. She encouraged me in my various activities and rejoiced in my successes. She had me meet influential people who influenced me also.

Albert's wife, Emma, did many nice things for me. She made life a bit easier. She, with her family, were someone to think about, and I felt I "belonged" a little.

As I mentioned before, high school friends were helpful, but many moved away and were married. Many of these, in 1954, have returned or finished rearing their families, and we are again enjoying each other. They seem to me like ships going out to sea, to return later after their mission, to the "home port."

In 1922, Mabel Haynes and I were appointed to teach in Fairfield High School in Madison County. I taught physics, general science, biology, bookkeeping, hygiene, and agriculture. You can imagine how busy I was, keeping one jump ahead of the classes. Mabel taught dramatics, English, and history.

In 1923, we both transferred to Springfield, Ohio, where I taught in Snyder Park Junior High for five years, under H. S. McCoy as principal--a very delightful five years. Mr. Frank Shelton, later high school inspector, was superintendent of the city and a good friend. Mabel taught at Roosevelt Junior High. Both buildings were new. We had pleasant years here.

I also taught in Wittenberg College (recommended by Professor Franklin McNutt). I taught professionalized geography and remedial classes for young teachers, during summer and after school. I had many observers and practice teachers from Wittenberg. I was observed because I was an "enthusiastic teacher." One summer I taught how to build a course of study in "Nature Study" for lower grades. We also worked out the plans.

In 1928, Mr. Mahaffey, Principal of South High School, Columbus, came to Springfield to "lock me over," as he said, and I was hired. I was on the program at a Superintendents' meeting at Wittenberg. Mabel had a place made for her by H. P. Swain in Crestview Junior High and later at North High School. I have taught geography in South High School, and have enjoyed twenty-five years of teaching at South. I was a senior teacher, guide and counselor for twenty-one years. We had about two hundred and twenty-five to two hundred and fifty seniors each June. Beside all this, I had about one hundred and fifty to one hundred and eighty pupils in classes daily. Every once in a while a student comes in to tell me that his father had gone to school to me and this makes me feel old, but he wouldn't send his son if he didn't think he got something.

A teacher often wonders, first, how much all her hard work accomplishes. Although good students like a teacher who expects something of merit, poor students often dislike anyone who requires some work of them. Having had to work hard for my education, I have little patience with today's average student who will not apply himself, and the indifferent attitudes of some parents.

I always enjoy hearing from, or seeing former students from year to year. Many of my boys went to war, and paid the supreme price (sixty of them). I have letters from some, before they went into battle, thanking me for some help I gave them. The most troublesome boy or girl will, often, return to see me when he comes to Columbus. If they return from great distance, I have had some bring unusual specimens of rock, or similar items. They seem glad to see me; I suppose, a way to let me know how much they had improved and were growing up. There are many stories here. I hope I am remembered as suggested by this poem.

A Teacher I Remember

He taught the printed page but there was more
 He gave the class than any book could hold,
 Unlocking minds, he opened wide the door
 Of inspiration, helping it unfold
 As boys and girls reached out with eagerness.
 He made the past a living thing and fused
 Its splendor with the present; loveliness,
 The tools of truth and beauty, these he used.
 Guiding with love and care, he channeled thought,
 Yet left its currents ever flowing free
 Toward harbors of the future to be sought
 By youthful helmsmen putting out to sea.
 He stirred the heart, he left his impress there
 With cherished wisdom that his pupils bear.

My enthusiasm for education prompted me to help to encourage young people to go to college. It was due to my influence that I, with considerable discouragement, was able to enter my niece Florence, and nephew Kenneth at Ohio Wesleyan. I helped them to help themselves, not only by giving money, but also by arranging loans for them. I felt they should have more education and expected them to get their degrees. Florence did. Kenneth had one year to go and was hindered because he got married. Life is difficult with an education--how much worse it can be without one! Wallace soon followed, going to Ada and Athens. Then Jerry graduated from Ohio State University. I tried to help Faith at Capital

University, but she left without my knowing it. She made her choice. Education is something the individual receiving it determines what he or she does with it.

Many other young people credit me with influencing their education. Winona Seibel claims I influenced her to go to school. She went to Cornell and got her B. A., then later to Bryn Mawr for her M. A. She was a little girl and I about eighteen or twenty--she wanted to do things--as she thought I did, not to follow the usual groove.

Cloe Ruggle brought her mother over to me to assure or convince her mother that it was the right decision to permit Cloe to go to State. She went, where she was happy at her work, and met her future husband. Her mother enjoyed her successes and she remained more independent, living her own life.

I mention these examples as I think every young person should realize that he often influences and shapes the lives of others by just doing. Being silently admired by some smaller ones. Many times by just being successful makes one the object to be imitated. Doing wrong does the same--but people naturally prefer doing right.

It's like the few leaves and few fishes--one may have only a few talents (certain abilities, possessions, money, health); through using them they multiply. We don't know how or why, but they affect and inspire children and others. (Or do we know why?)

TRAVELS

I have mentioned that in 1917, during my first year of teaching, that I quit my job to take a trip to Florida with Mrs. Pimmel. What an exciting trip that was! We went by way of Louisville, where we stopped off to visit Clara Ashton Clark and family, whose Business School I later attended. We then went to the Lake Okeechobee region in central Florida to visit the Homestead area, at Lokesee, Florida, which had been developed by Civil War Veterans, among them Chris Richard, formerly of Monroeville, Chic.

This was real frontier life. There were no roads; one got from here to there in a buckboard drawn by skinny horses with makeshift harness. There were a few horses around and my most exciting experience was riding horseback by moonlight through the woods to join the folks in a social hour after choir practice.

Later, Mrs. Pimmel and I stayed a while at Orlando. I enjoyed life here very much. I met a Mr. Cole, who took me to the Country Club for dancing and golf. We also met William and Henry Horn, cousins of my mother and Mrs. Pimmel. William drove a Stearn's Knight Auto which impressed me, as did the fact that he owned two hundred acres of orange groves.

But Palm Beach was something to "write home about." To me, it seemed like something right out of a story book. The Royal Poinciana was a rambling hotel. Here, the cream of society, all in formal attire danced to the music of outdoor orchestras, or dined in or out of the hotel. You should have seen me going here and there with a friend called Hughes, in, guess what--a bicycle, or pedalmobile, and since no autos were allowed in Palm Beach, pedalmobiles were all the rage. An occasional one today might still be seen there, although of course they have long since been replaced by autos.

A tornado destroyed the rail road which connected Palm Beach and West Palm Beach and the Royal Poinciana Hotel burned down, but the landscape remains, as do the bicycle paths.

In 1925, Mabel and I went to Europe for the whole summer, visiting seven countries in all. Of course we enjoyed Pompeii, Rome, Switzerland, England, Holland, Monte Carlo, Parliament, the Rhine, battle ground of War I, etc..

In 1928 we took a ten thousand mile trip through the West in a Chevrolet, visiting nearly all major parks, movie studios, Vancouver Island, Pacific Ocean, Pudget Sound, British Columbia, Victoria, and Catalina.

One summer we took an auto trip to Florida. We visited Key West via railroad, then by a British boat to Cuba.

Of course, we have been to New York and Washington and Williamsburg many times.

We have visited New England, several times going up the Massachusetts coast to Ogunquit, Maine, with its Cliff House; Booth Bay, on to Montreal; Quebec, and along the St. Lawrence River. We enjoyed the North Shore of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, going on to Stratford on Avon to see the Shakespeare plays.

In Wisconsin we enjoyed Lake Tomahawk with its Bide A Wee Hotel and returned there often.

Another trip East took us to the Adirondacks where we stayed at the Becker Hotel near Old Forge. We enjoyed Lake Placid with its skiing and bob sledding areas.

We explored the area north of the Great Lakes region; Mackinac Island, the Soo Canal, etc.. In Michigan, we camped at Torch Lake and took lake trips.

Another trip took us to South Dakota to see the Black Hills. I enjoyed Rapid City with its ten gallon hats and high heeled boots and precipitous hills.

We went South, to Berea, Kentucky; Gatinsburg, Tennessee; Atlanta, Macon, and Savannah, Georgia. We enjoyed the outdoor theaters and dramas. "Unto the Hills" in Cherokee, North Carolina; then at Manteo, North Carolina, "Lost Colony"; also "Common Glory" at Williamsburg. North Carolina offers Kitty Hawk, and Nags Head along its coast. Wonderful places. The State of Ohio has also been well covered and found worth while. There is a personality in each city and town.

BUSINESS VENTURES

Perhaps you wonder how I could do all these things. Well, let me tell you.

I worked several summers when I first began to teach. I had quite a successful experience in the selling field. I sold lots in real estate, and for payment, would take unknown or unlocated lots, or automobiles, or anything of value, which, luckily, I was able to turn into money. I often said I should have been a "junk dealer" or a barterer.

I sold brushes, Kellogg's Corn Flakes for the Kellogg Company, automobiles (in Springfield) as well as real estate with Kissell Real Estate Company. (I won prizes as a high seller in each.) I think I must have inherited business sense from my Grandfather Boehler.

I also bought old properties at a reasonable price, then proceeded to repair them. Put on new doors or shutters, hardwood floors or a new furnace, or bathroom. I always managed to come out of these deals with a profit when I resold them or rented them,

In 1929, I tried investing in common stock and grain. I soon took my losses. Again in 1953 I have re-bought preferred and common stock, but all from investigated, well-established Ohio firms which yield five or six per-cent, which is a wise plan for one as one grows older--I hope. (I keep my fingers crossed.) I have been interested in many things, such as antiques, tractors, or anything of value.

In 1945, I remodeled the farm house at Meyerling. The entire interior was removed, repartitioned, rearranged, and replastered. It is often difficult to give directions to men. It seems that the "animal just doesn't like it." I paid the men well for which I expected a full day's work. As you know, it doesn't always work out that way. I made in it a five room apartment and an efficiency apartment for myself, fully equipped.

I also remodeled a four-family apartment at Norwalk, two units at a time. Again 51 S. Main St., Monroeville, was remodeled. It had a filling station. This I sold later.

I do believe real estate is a sound way to build a reserve, but it should be done early in life. It must be bought right as there is where one makes money, as one must sell, so the other fellow can do well, too.

In 1950 I had the idea that I wasn't getting any use from my barn, so I made the cow stable into a "ranch house within the barn." It is all done with paneled knotty pine and is fully equipped and modern. I use it as a guest house and have seen others enjoy it very much, including myself. Friends from Columbus come for week ends or by the week. The old high school friends use it almost as a club house. We make Meyerling (the name of my farm, in family since 1858) a headquarters for meeting old friends, for family gatherings, and for neighbors and new folks, too. I have a special apartment in the house for myself. The tenant in the house helps care for the place and has five or six rooms. Part of the barn is used by my farmer for storage of grain or fertilizer. We maintain a very large, mowed area for a lawn.

AFFILIATIONS

When I came to Columbus, in 1928, I looked around for a church home and decided to join in the First Congregational Church on East Broad Street, where I have been active in the Alice Gladden Club, made up of business and professional women. I was on the Board of Franklin County and Columbus Campfire Girls for a long period. I have been a member of the A. A. U. W; Audubon Society; Friends of the Land; Monnett Club of Ohio Wesleyan University; Eastern Star at Norwalk; P. E. O.; National Council of Geography Teachers; and of course O. E. A.; C. O. - T. A.; and C. T. E. A.; Ohioana; and Franklin County Historical Society and others.

OTHER ACTIVITIES

In 1928, I was asked to give a speech titled "Making Geography Vital," to a School of Superintendents at Wittenberg.

I presented a paper on "Air Conditioning High School Students" to the Geography section of the C. O. T. A..

I also talked on "Meteorology and the Air Age" at our faculty meeting. I studied meteorology at O. S. U. during War II so as to teach boys about it.

In 1930, while I was working on my master's degree, I was asked by the Educational Press to write a work book of Europe. Mr. McSparran directed, and I worked hours upon hours on this book which was never published, since he fell out with Mr. Blakee of the Educational Press. Although I still have the manuscript, I feel it would not be worth the work necessary to bring it up to date. Never write unless you have a contract.

In 1942, I took part in a Washington Birthday program dedicated to our first school war casualty. This program was recorded, and was broadcast later.

I have enjoyed working with art, in clay and wood, and feel I might have gone far in this field, had I had the proper art training. I did make knobs, valances, lamps, etc.--flowers, dishes, pins, ear rings, and caricatures in clay or enamel. There are, and were, others.

PHILOSOPHY

As any one knows, I dared to be different. Looking back on my life, I sometimes wonder if I were not born thirty years too soon, since today many of the things which I did with disapproval, are accepted as "musts" for the present day girl.

Many times I had heartaches; it seemed that life was an up-hill process. Since my educational background was not too rich, I always had the feeling that I did not know what I should have. However, I did have determination, industry, average ability, good health, a rich religious and ethical training.

Mr. Van Horn and Jake Henniger helped me to get money to finish my education, with the aid of security from property my parents left me, and when I paid my notes, they assured me of future help should I need it.

It seems that everywhere I went, people were nice to me--eager to help and make suggestions. I recall such friends as the folks in Ashland: Cora Clark, the President of Utica Bank, besides friends in Springfield and Columbus.

I have always felt that I had unusual opportunity for making money. I should easily be worth half a million dollars, although I am not, had I taken time to investigate many good opportunities which came to me. Thank God for America where a woman, a granddaughter of an immigrant, can carve her own fortune, requiring only that she be courageous, understanding, industrious, and ambitious.

In making my many decisions, I was guided by the idea that "right makes might." In case some one hurt me, I did not always feel it my duty to try to discipline him. I believe that wrong doings usually catch up with any one and that hurting, dishonesty, lying, cheating, and wrong doing get one no where. I believe, when undecided, dare to do your duty as you understand it and even though in so doing you may be judged wrong, you will have the satisfaction in your heart of having done the best you could, and you will feel "all right" inside if you do what seems best.

Dean Smyser of Ohio Wesleyan University once said of me that I was like "water dropping on a rock." I finally made an impression and got what I went after. I believed in following my own ideas rather than those of others.

Living with Mabel Haynes has put a Christian Science outlook on my thinking. I believe, that in each of us, there should be a real Christ-like attitude which should control our thoughts, speech, and conduct. More spiritual households; more silences; less condemning and less criticism; less gossip. Let gossip go through these "narrow gates" - first, "Is it true?" then, "Is it needful?". In your mind, give a truthful answer, and in the next, the last and narrowest, "Is it kind?" To this, one may add, "Should you be one to talk?"; "Are you throwing stones?"; "Are you free from wrong doing?" I believe that ill-gotten gain does no one good. Take care of your things, your money, your friends, and they will take care of you.

"Spinoza, one of the wisest of men, and who lived consistently in accordance with his own wisdom, advised men to view passing events under the aspect of eternity. Those who can learn to do this will find a painful present much more bearable than it would otherwise be. They can see it as a passing moment, a discord to be resolved, a tunnel to be traversed. A small child who has hurt himself weeps as if the world contained nothing but sorrow, because his mind is confined to the present. A man who has learned wisdom from Spinoza can see even a lifetime of suffering as a passing moment in the lifetime of humanity. And the human race itself from its obscure beginning to its unknown end is only a minute episode in the life of the universe."

Bertrand Russell:

New Hopes for a Changing World

Now here is a spinster's view of family well-being. Every member is hurt if one member debauches, be he brother, cousin, uncle, aunt, or distant relative. No one wants to claim relationship then, but if he does well, no matter how distant he is, all are proud.

Members of the family or clan or kin (I mean father, mother, grandparents, uncles, aunts, and cousins) should deal with each other in close friendship and with kindness and concern. A single stick can be easily broken while if there is harmony, cooperation, loyalty, and discipline within the family, no one can be hurt.

A certain amount of earned income by branches shall be set in reserve so a fund can be drawn from in emergencies. No one then becomes a pauper or suffers from need.

In making marriages, incurring debts, naming and educating children, beginning new businesses, etc., each should seek advice from a family guidance council which is selected from the more able and understanding, or leaders.

The family is bound together by a "family law" which is amended from time to time. When a member is old enough, he is formally accepted as an adult, and swears allegiance to the family law, and conduct--ethical and religious. He would uphold and strengthen the everlasting ancestral foundation set down by his family. He would expand ideas, good living, education and training and enterprises bequeathed to him. There should be a strong family or kin sense. A pride in those that make good. Help and teach to prevent so-called failures and inferior complexes which lead to drinking and bad conduct.

Every family ought to help build up standards within the family or clan, that it could be said to a child, "No, we don't do it that way. Others may, but it is not accepted in our family." We don't want to destroy what has been built up through the years. No, we don't hang around places or people of unacceptable standards, therefore we won't get "involved." The family must be thrifty, as luxury ruins it. The family should recognize it is part masculine, but the men should be worthy. A large family should prevent undesirable conduct, and encourage the weaker ones. Cooperation, unity, loyalties, and stronger members could prevent casualties. Our ancestors are in all of us. Some have had stronger qualities; others may have had weaker ones but what other method could work better? The survival of the fittest? The law of tooth and fang? We dissipate, drink, gamble, talk too much, gossip, judge without knowing, feel inferior or superior. We just accept it and that's all? Is that a way to build a stronger family? I don't believe it! Why not try practicing brotherhood among our family? Other agencies, such as school, church, community - alone cannot do the job. It is within the Clan, Family, or Kin! The family council reigns, but does not rule. Outside advice may be secured if need be. Individualism is accepted as long as it does not debauch.

I believe in a representative type of government for country and family. There is an aristocracy of intelligence, taste and character. There will always be leaders and those who want to, or should be led--burden-bearers and free riders. There will always be more of the latter. Therefore wisdom is not always with the majority. Leaders can be right--history proves this--and we should not be beastly to them, but regard them, lest they lead us in the wrong direction. "Liberty is something we should not allow to be eaten, or nibbled away by ducks and geese."

I read this "The Aunt," and it expresses what I can not write better. In some small way and to some I hope I was "The Aunt."

"THE AUNT"

There was usually somewhere a now almost forgotten maiden aunt who furnished the extra ammunition needed for winning the decisive battle on some early day in an obscure, eager, young person's life... The good aunt always gives to nieces and nephews the something extra, the something unexpected, the something which comes from outside the limits of their habitual world... She belongs to nobody and to everybody. She belongs now to one child, now to another, and the one whose turn it is to draw her wins. This is the kind of aunt I rather hoped that I might be. I want to join the long line of the famous aunts of history: those individuals, sparkling and free, who left such treasures behind them--Jane Austen, Kate Greenaway, Louisa Alcott, Emily Dickinson, Robert Louis Stevenson's chief of our aunts--and Samuel Butler's Aunt Pontifex in The Way of All Flesh--aunts whose excellence in the role of aunthood is so richly shown in their lives and letters.

MEYERLING -- THE FARM

By

Lydia Meyer

Introduction

Why am I writing about Meyerling? This is my personal testimony. I believe in farming. It is a rugged life--less tension and strain and subjugation. So many do not appreciate what a fine piece of land was left to them by their parents. It was something for which I have been very grateful.

In my thinking, I can see the hard work, energy, planning and tender care my grandparents and my family gave to the many phases of Meyerling, to say nothing of the endless days of planning and hard work and some $20,000 more I put into it. Like them, I think this is a beautiful spot on the Huron River. Here they worked, walked and saw the seasons pass, each with such different ways of living and beauty. The noises get familiar: The snarling raccoon, the screeching owls in the tall tree back of the barn, the falling banks of earth, the crowing of the pheasants, and the calling of the different birds. I only hope that some one of the younger members of my family will see the beauty of the expanse of view in all directions and hope to live here and own the farm and enjoy it.

Meyerling, From 1858 On

When my parents left me, in 1921, the Old Maier Homestead, it was pretty dilapidated. However, it was nicely located, by the bank of a river. I had to have money to finish my education, and to meet other needs, and so I borrowed money and mortgaged it. I did not fear a mortgage, as I knew I'd pay it off. But Meyerling needed much, so step by step--or almost board by board, foundation by foundation, I worked at keeping up fundamentals on the building. Because I was a woman, many times I noticed a half-affectionate smile or complete pity on faces about many of my activities around the farm.

I pulled out all the fences, as I couldn't get anyone to cut the weeds. I thought it a waste of land to have wide fence rows and lanes and wide areas for weeds between the road and field. I tore down all unnecessary buildings. The little white house with the belfry and dinner bell, which called men for meals, or for any emergency for a century, I retained in all renovation. This was the bell George and John Meyer heard. I also retained the sagging roof; plastered walls on the porch, and wonderful museum specimens of "ripple stone" which made the porch floor. At the time the house was built, cut sand stone from the ridge, Strong's ridge, I believe, was used in the community. Monroeville has several similar ripple stone walks.

I retained the unbalance of space between windows; as windows were placed where they were needed from the inside, whether balanced from the outside or not. The small windows would only be counted a half-story, an idea coming from New England, as a full two-story house was taxed more than a one and one-half story.

About 1932 the steps to my apartment were made by Oscar. In the final remodeling in 1945, I rearranged rooms and made an extra efficiency apartment with bath (the tile floor Mabel and I laid), kitchenette, and living room; a place to stay when I wished to visit the farm. Besides repartitioning for the larger apartment, replastering, adding extra bathroom, front steps to the south, new stair way, new windows, adding new siding and insulating, new chimney, furnace and other things, I had (at a prior time) natural gas laid in. With the help of neighbors I had electricity put in, and in 1941, I had built a well, which should be adequate for some time to come. This was a real victory, after two or three attempts at drilling had failed. It is water that keeps the whole farm going, for watering as well as for bathing, cooking, etc.

I think this the most beautiful, snug, as well as productive, farm in many parts. It has scenery, wild life, recreation, and drainage, as well as irrigation possibilities and lots more. There is opportunity right here at our feet. Crops can be doubled. I have had, and can have, the finest crops. When the soil is stirred, it flows in fine crumbles, black and beautiful, with a most delightful aroma. Clover stands high; soybeans erect and full of pods--"an extravagant and voluptuous feel." Meyerling is mostly level and gives a feeling of expanse and well-being, with river land of some twenty-five acres, more or less, for wild life. But so much more could be done here!

It is a joy to look for miles and imagine the old neighbors come and go--walking and with their buggies--visiting my grandparents and always taking something as a gift from the farm, on their way home. The lilac tree (almost) and snowball tree, daffodils, japonica and mock orange are still there in 1954, which grandmother Meyer planted at least seventy-five years ago. The big pear is over one hundred years old. As my grandparents and parents walked, felt and loved this land, I hope some of my grandnieces or grandnephews will follow. It is a delight to see the swaying of those long trees from the bottom, reaching higher than the barn, swaying like giant dinosaurs. Those primeval trees must never be cut--they divert the clouds and hence the lightning. They act as a lightning rod for this area, because of their location. The buildings are at a vulnerable spot. But these trees prevent much, to say nothing of the Osage Orange which prevent erosion and wind to work too much. These were planted by John for erosion prevention.

There are so many things on this ninety-six acres! As was said, "some farms are dead, others alive, depending on who owns them" and if its being loved and having someone watching everything that counts, then these acres should flourish. They were primarily intended for growing people. People with ideas and ideals. People who loved the land and enjoyed all that was about them. "The best fertilizer on any farm is the footprints of the owner"--Confucius. This Meyerling has had over one hundred years of loving ownership.

I see to it that lime, nitrogen, green manure, and fertilizer and right handling as well as good drainage is done. In 1950 I received a reward of merit for soil conservation. I was the only woman farmer with one hundred and sixty-seven men of the state to receive such awards. We all met at the Southern Hotel for luncheon. The award meant that more practices of conservation were carried on on Meyerling than other farms. I was the fifth in the county to carry out

A. A. A. Conservation practices in its beginning. We removed the road going to the river which crossed the best land, and made a private path in a lesser productive area. We turned the direction of furrows north and south, more according to contour, as we have little slope; made fields more according to the kind of soil. My last two projects were tiling on south and west field and closing a gully. Leveling and putting a long pipe into it--removing a tree which was causing the wash and at the same time interfering with machinery. My next will be to use a leveler on the land to remove small uneven places.

The value of Meyerling would be according to the imprints of my work and my ancestry. "The imprint of what we have done is written there on the earth itself--our thrift, our intelligence, energy and 'feel' for the earth, or our greed, stupidity and shiftlessness." One must see what is going on--under one's feet--in field, or lawn. Each field seems to have a story; each has different soil, and each type of soil should be used as one field. Each year Meyerling produces a little more and could do much more. I am always looking for a better way and practice to aid nature's processes.

As I was looking up the bank near the barn, I saw blue clay. Somewhere in my memory I remembered having heard it would be good to mold--so I procured some and washed it and have made a fascinating hobby of making flowers for pins, ear-rings, dishes, masks of people; etc.; another product of Meyerling.

I had maintained the fine old barn for years with no use, so in 1950 I decided I could make a ranch house where the cow stable was. So we cut two picture windows, totaling seventeen feet, giving a vista down to the river. (I had to cut some small trees and brush to clear the view.) I left some one-foot beams (of which there were many) show. They had all been hewn by hand. The rest was covered with knotty-pine, however; it was all well insulated before. A concrete floor and false basement under the utility area were made. The two bedrooms, living room, dining room, kitchen, bath, and utility room make it an adequate place to live. The barn has the 'middle' where, earlier, the big hay loads came in which was made into a "breeze way." Most convenient to use for picnics during stormy weather, or as a garage, or a play area or anything. It has a black-top floor. I receive nothing from this except what good times friends have staying here. It is fully equipped. I have had here the "Gathering of John P. and Wilhelmina Meyer's descendants." They were most happy events. Here was held my cousins' reunion or in-gathering; old school friends have had, for years, an annual gathering here. It's more like a Club House, since my personal things are in my apartment at the house and everyone can, and does, make himself at ease.

Besides all this, there is a large well-kept lawn to the north and another to the south and still more--in most any direction. I make this a place for fishing, wild flowers, and birds. I do not like it when hunters kill off my squirrels, as there are plenty of walnut trees as well as butternut trees, and squirrels like them.

But in minutes we all can be at Lake Erie on the light-house pier at Huron, where the river which passes through Meyerling empties into Lake Erie. Monroeville is about one mile, Norwalk three, or four, Milan three or four, Sandusky eighteen, Bellevue nine, Attica fifteen, Lake Erie fifteen. I wish that Meyerling could be a place kept for tired, anxious, good people for clean fun and enjoyment.

The larger apartment is meant for a family who enjoy a nice place and do keep up the yards and lawn as part payment of rent. The Henry and Cletus Mayers were my farmers some fifteen years. Since then, Schaefer Brothers another fifteen years or so. Both were neighbors. With their help, of course, I was able to make the farm a paying project. They only farmed the land well and carried out suggestions agreed upon for which they got one-half of the crops. We have no written agreement. We agree on items, and that is it! For good will, they may do some small job that's not in the "book," and sometimes I forbear a disappointment, I worked hard and long to make Meyerling what it is today. It produces well in crops and enjoyment.

INDIANS WANT HURON COUNTY GIVEN BACK AFTER 158 YEARS

Norwalk, Ohio. Oct. 28, 1953. Descendants of the Senecas, Hurons, Delawares, Wyandots, Miamis, and Chippewas claim their Indian ancestors were cheated in 1795, and they want Huron County back.

If they can't have the fertile farm land around Norwalk, they want the Federal government to put up a little more than the two cents an acre the Indians got 158 years ago at the treaty of Greenville.

The Indians, whose suit at Washington, D. C. was made public yesterday, contend their ancestors were forced to live on Western reservations. If those ancestors had got the money Huron County is worth, they would have been able to buy good land and live better, the descendants complain.

After the treaty, the Indians moved to the northwestern part of the state and by 1817 they had lost all title to lands in Ohio.

The suit does not set specific damages, the descendants asking that the Indian Claims Commission fix compensation.

In 1950 the commission awarded $32,000,000 to Ute Indians who said government sharpers had done their ancestors out of Western lands.

Huron County is twelve miles south of Lake Erie and about forty miles southwest of Cleveland.

The largest component of the total is the cost of the land. The land is owned by the State of New York and is being sold to the private sector. The cost of the land is $100 million. The cost of the buildings is $200 million. The cost of the infrastructure is $100 million. The cost of the other components is $100 million. The total cost is $500 million.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or objective. This involves a clear understanding of what needs to be achieved and the resources available.

2. Next, a plan is developed. This includes setting priorities, allocating resources, and establishing a timeline for completion.

3. The third step is implementation. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress regularly.

4. Finally, evaluation is conducted to assess the results of the process and determine if the objectives have been met.

5. The final step in the process is to document the results. This involves creating a report that outlines the findings of the evaluation and the lessons learned from the process.

6. The report should be shared with all stakeholders involved in the process, including the project team, management, and other relevant parties.

7. The final step is to review the process and make any necessary adjustments. This involves reflecting on the overall experience and identifying areas for improvement.

8. The process is then repeated for future projects, ensuring that the lessons learned are applied to improve the outcomes.

WILHELMINA LOUISA BOEHLER HEYMAN, (called Louise) was born November 13, 1859 in Peru Township, Huron County; was the fourth child--second daughter, of Johann Philip and Margaretha Seibel Boehler. Louisa was the first baby to be baptized in the St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Pontiac, Ohio. She was baptized by Rev. Schmogrow. She attended the Parochial Lutheran School at Pontiac, Ohio. Mr. Schmogrow was the teacher and pastor.

On March 9, 1882, she married CHARLES HEYMAN who was a son of William A. Heyman (1830), born in Nassau, Germany, who arrived in America 1849, and JOHANNETTA MOHR a little later. They raised fifteen children. William A. owned four hundred and twenty-five acres of good land. Charles was the oldest of this union. He was born November 16, 1858 in Sherman Township, Huron County, Ohio. He was baptized January 1, 1859, at Hunt's Corners, by Rev. Kuss. On May 11, 1873 he was confirmed in the reformed faith by Rev. Derr. In 1877 he joined the St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Pontiac, Ohio.

Their farm was in Lyme Township, near Hunt's Corners. Two years later they moved to Peru Township on the Boehler homestead to keep house for her father. Five years later, they moved to their own farm nearby, where they lived for twenty-eight years.

He was neat and tidy, and a hard worker. He had the common education of the times. He retired in 1916, and moved to Monroeville, where he was employed in the road department.

Two children were born to them: GOTTHOLD WILLIAM, on April 13, 1883, and ANNA LOUISA, February 3, 1886.

Both Louisa and Charley helped to organize the Trinity Lutheran Church in Monroeville, Ohio. Louise died February 4, 1934, at the age of seventy-four, and was buried in the Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio. Charley died, September 9, 1942, at the age of eighty-three. He, too, was buried in Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio.

GOTTHOLD WILLIAM HEYMAN was born April 13, 1883, in Lyme Township, Huron County, Ohio. He was the only son and oldest child of Charles and Louisa Boehler Heyman. He was baptized by Rev. August Ulrich. On March 29, 1896, he was confirmed in St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Pontiac, Ohio, by Rev. F. J. Schultz.

He attended the public school at Pontiac. On December 30, 1909 he was united in marriage to MARY MATILDA THOMAS, who was born December 4, 1872.

In 1910 they moved from Peru Township, to Fairfield Township, near North Fairfield, where they had purchased a farm. On February 10, 1924, his wife, Mary, was taken by death. Mary was a Roman Catholic. In 1930 he married ORPHA UPP, and later was divorced.

On September 28, 1933, he was married to ALMA KLEWER of Fremont, Ohio. A daughter, LOUISA WILHELMINA was born to them on May 10, 1934. They lived in Monroeville, Ohio.

He died, March 5, 1951, at the age of sixty-seven. He was buried in Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio.

She attended the public school at Pontiac. On October 31, 1906 she was united in marriage to JOHN GEORGE LINDER, born August 23, 1879. He was a grandson of George Linder, who was born in 1822 in Bavaria, whose father was a vine grower and wine producer. The grandfather George and his parents set out to America in 1845 from Havre to New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Portsmouth, Cleveland and Huron County. Among his children was George Jr., of Peru Township who had two children--J. George Linder and a sister who died earlier. J. George was a Lutheran and a Democrat. He was a good mechanic; level-headed and owned about two hundred and twelve acres which he operated until his early death. His two daughters own it now.

Their two daughters are: CRTRUDE LOUISE, July 5, 1912, and MARGARET ELIZABETH, October 22, 1915.

OTTO G. BOEHLER was the sixth child of J. Philip and Margaretha Seibel Boehler, born September 5, 1869 in Peru Township, and died October 5, 1918 of a heart ailment.

He was regarded as a good neighbor and an efficient farmer by all who knew him. His greatest ambition was to keep his farm free of noxious weeds and also to keep his farm machinery in first class working order and to have all crops harvested before the winter season set in. He was an early riser and was never known to own an alarm clock. He prided himself in being neatly attired at all times.

He served on Lyme Special School District Board of Education for several terms. He was Road Supervisor of Lyme Township for a number of years.

He was a member of St. John's Lutheran Church of Bellevue, Ohio.

On January 7, 1892, he married EMMA SEEL HORN, born March 18, 1871, and died at her home in Bellevue March 18, 1941. Her parents were Philip and Catherine Seel Horn. They were Evangelical. She was a sister of Louise who married Otto's brother Henry. She was related to the Taunte Horns family. Emma was helpful and friendly; a good housekeeper.

After Otto's death, she bought a home in Bellevue, Ohio and remained there until her death. Arthritis seemed to be her illness.

They had three children: Clarence, Alma, and Adolph.

He takes a great deal of pride in helping to keep their home at 148 Union Street, Bellevue, Ohio, in respectable order.

BOEHLER + KNOLL

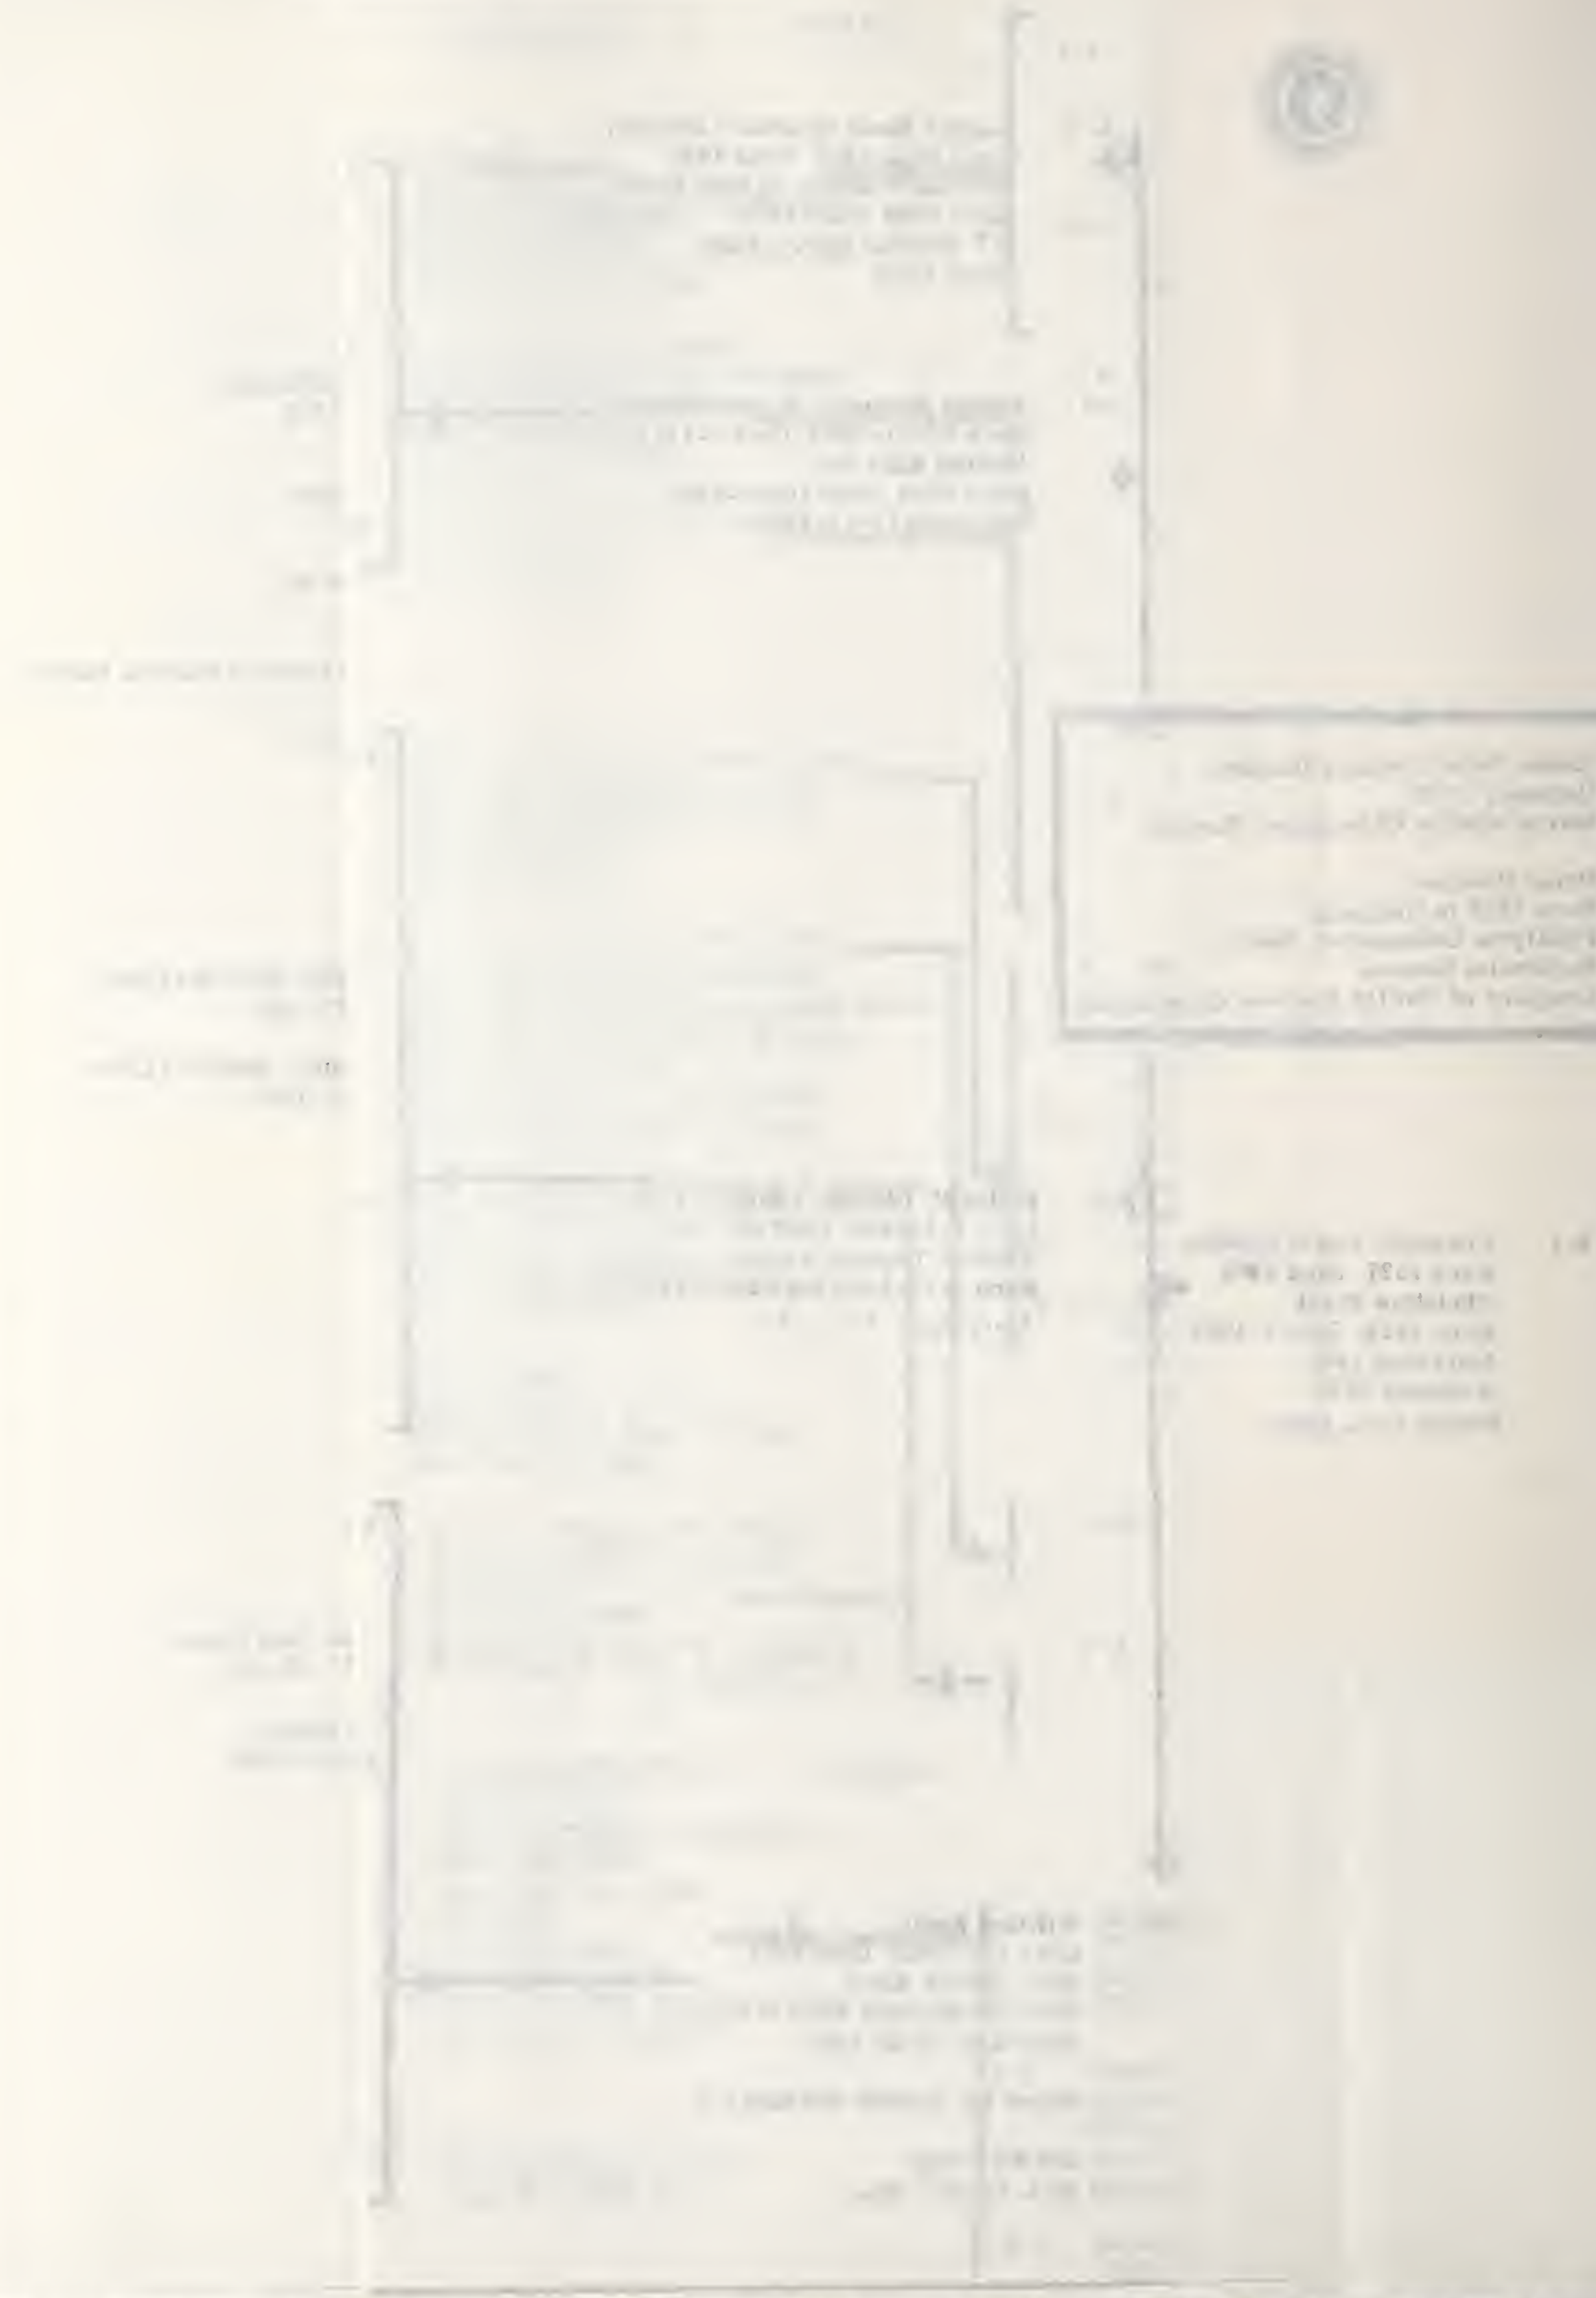

Chart IV. - ELIZABETH BOEHLER KNOLL

¹² LIZETTA (BOEHLER) KNOLL PIMMEL was born October 2, 1850 at the Knoll farm in Peru Township. She was the eldest daughter of Elizabeth Boehler and Christian Knoll. She was educated in the usual manner of the Protestant Germans, Church and Township School. At a young age she married a man from New York City, WILLIAM PIMMEL who was well mannered and dressed well. He was very dapper. He was a merchant with ideas. He took active part in the town civic affairs which the German-Americans did not at this time.

(He was a half brother to Henry Flatt who lived on 99—just South of the Peru Township School. Henry had a daughter Elsie. Her mother was a Thorn. She claims many complexes because of strict discipline etc.) Mr. Pimmel was born in 1839 and died in 1892.

Mrs. Pimmel, as most knew her, conducted a dry goods store. She was well informed. She influenced many of her kin toward cultural ways of conduct and so on. The young girls--The Ashton, Seel, Horn, Lydia Meyer, and many girls not related, were influenced by her. She often was critical—but one received much from her. Many young folk of the town, were her guests.

She learned the "Yankee" ways earlier than some cousins. Mrs. Pimmel traveled some. Lydia Meyer and she spent a winter of 1917 in Florida. After retirement, she lived one winter at the home of a cousin, Mrs. John Meyer. She belonged to the Evangelical Church in Monroeville and the Ladies Aid which really was composed of kith and kin.

Mrs. Pimmel had no children of her own, but she influenced many. She died in 1931, and was buried on their lot in Riverside. The stone is a very dark granite.

² LOUISE JOHANETTA (BOEHLER) KNOLL SEEL was born October 31, 1853 at the family farm near Pontiac. She was trained to be a farmer's wife and housekeeper, attending the local country school and Lutheran Church.

On December 11, 1870 at 17 years, she married PHILIP KARL SEEL, born in 1843. He died October 24, 1892. Little is available about him. This couple had three children, AMELIA, OTTO, AND LYDIA. Mrs. Seel was left a widow with the children. It seems many of the "older girls" were left widows with families, as were the younger ones. The affairs of life of the man must have been ~~so strenuous~~ Louise lived with her son Otto and family at the Knoll-Seel homestead. On June 13, 1925 Louise died and was buried at Riverside. Louise seldom differed, actively. She was quiet and gentle.

¹³ AMELIA KNOLL SEEL TREMAINE, the eldest daughter of Louise (Boehler) Knoll and Philip Seel was born at the family farm. Amelia was an attractive woman. She attended the local school. She married FAY TREMAINE who was a baker and had a shop in Monroeville. This couple had three children--FERN, CEYLON, AND HARIAN.

Amelia died rather young. After a time, Fay married again. Little is available on this family. See chart for dates. Lydia, Otto, and Amelia are all passed on, so source of information is not available.

¹⁴ FERN (SEEL) TREMAINE WATTERS WAHL was born September 21, 1900. She graduated from Monroeville High School and Clark School of Business, Louisville, Kentucky. She did secretarial work in Fremont and other places. She married a MR. WATTERS, whom she later divorced. There is a daughter from this union, ARDETH. Fern married later to HOWARD WAHL of Fremont and lives in Fremont.

¹⁵ ARDETH (SEEL TREMAINE) WATTERS ROBERTS is the only child of Fern Tremaine Watters Wahl. She married SAM ROBERTS of Fremont. Ardeth has a daughter, No. 1, LINDA FAY. See chart for dates. The Roberts' live in Fremont.

²⁴ CEYLON FAY (SEEL) TREMAINE was born in Monroeville and graduated from high school. He earned a B.Sc. degree in Pharmacy and runs a drug store in Sandusky. He is the second eldest child of Amelia and Fay Tremaine. He has two children, DAN AND JUNE TREMAINE. Dan is married and has a daughter, LINDA JUNE. See chart for dates.

Chart IV. - ELIZABETH BOEHLER KNOLL

William T. Ashton was born January 10, 1850. His parents were William and Sallie Burch Ashton. These people came from Lincolnshire, England, originally, but lived in New York State before coming to Ohio. They settled on Steuben Road, having made the westward trip to this area by wagon in 1831.

The grandfather erected a log house and resolutely set himself to the task of clearing a tract of 130 acres. The grandfather died the next year. He had seven children: James, Thomas, William, John, Edward, Mary, and one that died as an infant. William, the father of William T., died on March 17, 1890. In 1866 the Ashton farm was purchased and known as "Riverbend."

The mother of William T. passed away in 1872 when William T. was 22 years old. The children were Mary who died young; Anna, wife of C.A. Howe and who lived in Monroeville, was known as Aunt Ann to the Ashton girls. William T., Lewis J. and Eva died early, not much is known about them. On the William T. Ashton farm was built a commodious residence and barn. Also a cable foot bridge across the river. Riverbend had covered 200 acres and remained in the family until about 1950 when it was sold to a Dr. Sparks. William T. Ashton moved to Monroeville in a big house on Fulton Street. He died February 2, 1918. There were three girls born to William T. and Emily (Boehler) Knoll Ashton; CLARA, ALICE, AND MYRTLE. Emily Knoll was attractive and a pretty dresser. She died September 7, 1907, 51 years old. Her loss was deeply felt by an extensive circle of relatives and friends. Emily had two sisters, Mrs. Louise Seel and Mrs. Lizetta Pimmel and one brother William Knoll. The Ashtons were Republicans and Presbyterians.

¹³ CLARA LIZETTA (KNOLL) ASHTON CLARK was the eldest child of Emily Knoll and William T. Ashton—Steuben Road—Monroeville, Ohio. She was born February 11, 1874 and was of a smaller stature than her mother or sister Alice. Clara went to the township (red brick) school nearby and later to Monroeville High School. This going to Monroeville school was a problem for country folk—as the roads were mud and long distances. The Ashton girls had a white horse "Winnie" which was used, and Mrs. Pimmel their aunt, helped out both with a stable and also at times the girls stayed with her.

After High School Clara went to Oberlin College of Business and later to the Zanerian Art School in Columbus. She taught penmanship in Norwalk, Ohio, to all grades. Her handwriting was beautiful. Clara taught in Webbsettlement Township School before her college training.

On June 7, 1901, Clara married PETER WEBSTER CLARK of Denton, Maryland whom she met at Zaner Art School. After marriage the two started a Business School in North Tanawanda, New York (near Niagara Falls) in Y.M.C.A. building.

In 1905 they bought the Wassey Business College in Norton Bldg., Louisville, Kentucky. A year later they bought at 937 South 4th and it became the Clark School of Business. In 1937, the year of "Floods"—caused changes and the school moved to 3rd and Walnut. By this time both Clara and Webster were failing in health and the children ran the school until it was finally sold. They both worked hard. They were members of the Methodist Church. They lived at 937 South 4th for many years, then 1506 Cherokee Road at Okalona, then finally 882 Clark Lane.

They were a devoted couple with high standards and helped many young people to better themselves. They had three children. Clara died February 21, 1946 and is buried at Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville on Ashton lot.

P. WEBSTER CLARK, husband of Clara, born August 20, 1871 and died December 20, 1954. He was the fourth child of Peter Thomas Clark and Elizabeth Clark from Denton, Maryland. 3³ EIMER KNOLL was the only son of William Knoll and Mary Schild Knoll. He was educated in Bellevue Schools. Little is known--but he died while still a young man. He was born February 4, 1892.

OSCAR (HYMAN) ERF was a descendant of Johannette Boehler Hyman and her daughter Dorothea (Boehler) Hyman Erf and Philip Erf. He was the youngest son, born December 17, 1874; died April 28, 1947. He lived on the home place on Road 39, south of Monroeville. He graduated from Monroeville High School. He attended Monroeville Evangelical Church. He received his Bachelor of Science Degree from O. S. U. in 1899. He worked his way through college. He specialized in dairying. There was very little at O. S. U. in this field. Before teaching at O. S. U., he served in University of Illinois and Kansas State Colleges as Professor in Dairying and Animal Husbandry.

Oscar organized twenty-four Milk Associations in Indiana, Kentucky, and Ohio. He helped develop the Creameria de Mard of Cuba. In 1903 he attended Von Behring Institute in Germany. He was a founder of the Alpha Zeta Agriculture Fraternity. A quote from O. S. U. board of Trustees: "Professor Erf was a pioneer in believing chronic diseases could be attacked through supplementation of the diet with some of trace mineral or their application to the soils as fertilizers. This was at the turn of the century.

Other men worked along these lines. J. F. Wischhausen, Dr. Irene Levis, Dr. Francis M. Pottenger, Jr., the Randleigh Farms, Lockport, New York. It was discovered that prolonged periods of lactation in animals showed evidences of serious malnutrition such as very soft bones, weakling calves. The suggested feeding by Erf, when herds appeared with such, was a mineral mixture, cut green feed and sprouted corn. This saved the calves and made healthy cattle. This idea was carried over into treatment of people. The soil was given minerals and plants growing in it would have the mineral. Cobalt deficiency in food was shown up. The story of the "Miracle in the Ozarks" is a vindication of dairyman's friend, Oscar Erf.

Through the years Erf developed new methods of silage preservation and green alfalfa and grass, sprouting of grains and dehydration of hay, all aimed to keep the "green factor". He also noted iodine and manganese deficiencies. Erf was able to get a sympathetic ear from friends such as Ernest Scott, Professor of Pathology at O. S. U. Medical College and Dr. Johnathan Forman, leading evangelist for more good food from good soil. Erf had established that milk cows not receiving any green materials eventually would not breed and herds would degenerate.

Oscar Erf was a tall, dark-haired, slow, soft-spoken man. June 28, 1905 he married ALICE (KNOLL) ASHTON, second daughter of William and Emily (Boehler) Knoll Ashton, who live on Peru Center Road at River Bend, south of Monroeville. They were cousins. Oscar and Alice Erf had one child. DR. LOWELL ASHTON ERF was born March 3, 1909. Alice died, December 28, 1914, of cancer.

Oscar remarried, years afterward, having maintained a home for himself and Lowell with the help of housekeepers. NORA PECK, his efficient secretary for years, originally from Charlestown, Ohio, became his second wife. She died April 1, 1931, not many years after her marriage to Erf.

He died April 28, 1947 while Emeritus Professor, serving O. S. U. from 1907 to 1940. Buried at Riverside, Monroeville, Ohio. Much more interesting material might be written.

ALICE (KNOLL) ASHTON ERF was born December 3, 1876 and died December 28, 1914. She was the second daughter of William T. Ashton and Emily (Boehler) Knoll Ashton. She went to the red school house near their farm, "Riverbend"

CHAPTER 1 - THE CONCEPT OF THE STATE

The concept of the state is a central one in political science. It is a complex idea that has evolved over time and across different cultures. In its simplest form, a state is a political entity that exercises authority over a defined territory and its inhabitants. However, the concept is far more nuanced than this. It encompasses a wide range of factors, including the source of power, the structure of government, and the relationship between the state and its citizens. The study of the state is therefore a multifaceted one, drawing on insights from history, sociology, and political theory. This chapter will explore the various dimensions of the state, from its origins to its modern-day functions. We will examine how the state has changed over time, and how it continues to shape the lives of people around the world. By the end of this chapter, you should have a solid understanding of what the state is, and why it matters.

LOUIS WILLIAM SCHELD, second child of Philip Scheld and his wife, Wilhelmina Boehler Scheldt. He was born in Peru Township, near "Pontiac Station," in Huron County, Ohio, on the second day of June, 1855. He was baptized and confirmed in the German Evangelical Church of Monroeville, Ohio. He received his education in the Pontiac School, and the German School at Monroeville. He spent his entire youth on his father's farm, assisting with the work. The Scheld's original home was near Pontiac Church, across the road. It burned.

After their marriage, they went to live and start farming on a farm owned by the Scheld's, and located one and one-half miles north of Monroeville on the Peru Center Road.

On this farm their two children, WALTER PHILIP, and MABEL, were born. This farm was their home until 1920, after selling the farm, they retired to their home on Broad Street in Monroeville. Here they enjoyed life together until October 1926, when Mrs. Scheld passed away. Then he went to live with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peadon, who lived one and one-half miles North East on the River Road from Monroeville. His health failed and he passed away six months later on May 23, 1927. They are both buried in Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville.

WALTER PHILIP SCHELD was born January 26, 1886 on his father's farm near Monroeville, Ohio. He was baptized in the Evangelical Church of Monroeville, Ohio. He was educated in the township school. He grew to manhood, assisting his father on the farm. He was a cornet player in the Monroeville band for years. In 1916 he decided to go to Akron to start life in the factory, but World War I came along and he enlisted in the Merchant Marines, where he served until the war was over. But before he went away with the Marines, he married ZETTA LAIS, of Norwalk, Ohio.

After the war, they returned to Akron and started a home on North Hill, where they lived in the house they now own on Schiller Avenue. He was employed by the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Company until he was retired at the age of sixty-five. They now enjoy the life of retired people, and can enjoy the pleasures of their grandchildren. Henry was the son of George and Emma Holden Peadon and was born August 20, 1885 and confirmed in the Episcopal Church.

Henry and Mabel started farming on his father's farm, better known as the "Young Farm", and is located a half mile north of "Myerling" the home of this book's author. In 1933, they purchased this farm from the Peadon's, and then they started to bring to realization all their dreams and plans for a modern and beautiful country home. After a few years of work and sacrifice their dreams came true. Mabel and Henry were kindly neighbors and helpful.

WILLIAM ERF, SR., oldest son of Philip and Dorothea (Boehler) Hyman Erf, was born May 7, 1857 in Peru Township at what was later known as the Louis Erf Farm.

He attended the local school at the corner of Route 99 and Horn Road. Later, the German School at Monroeville, and finally the Monroeville Public School. He was trained in the Immanuel Evangelical Church and was an officer many times. He worked on his father's farm until he married.

On March 8, 1883 he married WILHELMINA AUGUSTA (BOEHLER) SCHELDT, fifth child of Philip and Wilhelmina Boehler Scheldt. They started farming on a farm purchased by his parents ten years prior, from the Edgars in Lyme Township, who gave employment to his mother when she migrated to America and admired it. This was a characteristic of many Germans, to buy the farm that gave them employment. In a few years, after establishing themselves, William and his wife purchased the farm from his parents.

They built barns and houses. Dairying seemed to be their specialty, and marketing of milk was a problem which they improved by organizing a Co-Op Creamery at Kimball, Ohio, and later at Monroeville. In 1918 a registered guernsey herd was started and breeding and dairying was carried on. A herd of fifty were, and still are, maintained. So well have the cows been cared for that they now (1954) have an accredited herd, by Federal test. Also, every animal is in advanced register, meaning each animal has high production records.

William Erf was an agitator for good schools and served on Lyme Special School Board for about twenty-five years. He was a director of the Hess Hardware Co., a charter member of the Lyme Grange and generally a leader in his community. He was honored by the "Ohio Farmer" as one of the first twenty men to be called a "Master Farmer of Ohio" for that particular year.

In 1901 he had an accident with a corn shredder in which he lost his left hand. At the age of sixty-three he was paralyzed and lived at his family home under the faithful care of his children, until the age of seventy-three. He died November 9, 1930. He is buried in Riverside Cemetery.

WILHELMINA (BOEHLER) SCHELDT ERF was the fifth child of Philip and Wilhelmina Boehler Scheldt. Born February 2, 1862. She, too, was trained in the same local school as William on Route 99 and Horn Road. At the age of twenty-one she married William Erf at her home near Pontiac. She belonged to and was trained in the Immanuel Evangelical Church. She and her husband took part in about the same activities and were a cooperative team which lead to success in farm life.

She was a charter member of Lyme Grange and lecturer of the Pomona Grange. She often joked that she have engraved on her memorial a milk can, as she worked so long with them.

Mrs. Erf, "Minnie", as many knew her, was a capable woman with good managing ability. She worked in her church, the Immanuel Evangelical in Monroeville and the Ladies' Aid. She held office many times. She had dignity and pride. She drove a white horse with phaeton--a buggy with fenders--to her meetings. She mingled with her rich and kin and enjoyed them as they did her.

This couple had four children: NORMA, CORA, ELZY, and WILLIAM PHILIP.

NORMA SCHNEIDER ERF eldest child of William and Wilhelmina Scheldt Erf, was born January 28, 1881, died September 18, 1951. She spent her childhood on Chestnut Ridge Farm and in Lyme Township High School. She went to Normal School and taught in North Monroeville in 1903 and 1904, and in Monroeville grades about 1906; later graduated from Michigan State Normal College. She received a degree of Bachelor of Science in Education at the University of Wisconsin. She spent about twelve years as public teacher and assistant principal of the Normal School at Ft. Wayne, Indiana. She was on the Ohio Institute for five years. She came back home to Chestnut Ridge Farm and worked with her brother and sisters in establishing a large herd of registered guernsey cattle. She was secretary of the North Central Guernsey Breeders' Association for twenty-seven years. She was a Master of Lyme Grange and a member of the County, State, and National Grange. She was a Republican Committee woman from Lyme Township. She belonged to the County Red Cross, and to the Eastern Star. Her hobbies were "House Study," birds, flowers, rocks, etc., and reed weaving.

Norma had a heart problem and thyroid difficulty. She had been taken to a hospital for an operation and died in September, 1951. She is buried on the family lot, in Riverside Cemetery, Monroeville, Ohio.

CORA ERF was the second child born to William and Wilhelmina Augusta (Scheldt) Erf, on May 26, 1886, at the home farm in Lyme Township, now known as "Chestnut Ridge Farm".

She attended Lyme School and graduated from the high school there in 1904. She taught in North Monroeville School for two years, when she was called home to be with her mother, who was ill, and help with the work which never be done on a farm where there are lots of activities. She was an ardent lover of music and having studied under the best teachers then available, turned to part-time teaching in primary schools. This was done for many years.

From early childhood when she followed her father to the barn (rather than help with the house work) she milked cows, and lived that work so much that it became second nature and made it an easier task when incidents and accidents in the family called on her to assume the duties of carrying on the work of the Registered Dairy (Grade) Herd and the farm.

She was one of the first in the county to keep poultry production records, one of the first three women to hold office on the County Farm Bureau Board, a seventh degree degree member, a chapter member of Lyme Grange and Master of same for two years. Also, captain of the Lyme Grange for eleven years and held office in many of the other stations of county and local grange. She is a member of the Eastern Star. At an early age she became a member of the Immanuel Evangelical Church.

ELMY WILHELMINA ERF was the third daughter born to William and Wilhelmina Augusta (Scheldt) Erf on January 28, 1892, at the family home in Lyme Township, now known as "Chestnut Ridge Farm".

Having two older sisters, she was always considered the "baby" of the family until the arrival of a little brother six years later. To the men, then employed on the farm, and living in the home she became their pet; so much so, that to their passing day, several of them always referred to her as "Our Little Elsie"

She attained her education in the schools of Lyme Special District (which at that time maintained a high school), and graduated from there in 1909. Always interested in educational and community projects, she helped organize a club which had for its object the promotion of post graduate work in and around the schools. This club was known as Lyme Buoy Club and later, became the setting for Lyme Grange No. 2027, which was organized in 1915. So, as a charter member her interests in this organization were such, that she served as lecturer the first fifteen years. Then served as Lady Assistant Steward, Master, and again a fifteen term as Secretary.

At present, she is again Master of the Grange. She is also a seventh degree Granger. Her church affiliations began at an early age in the Monroeville Evangelical Church and is a member of Althea Chapter, order of the Eastern Star.

When three years of age her mother taught her to recite and encouraged by her great grandmother (Johannette Boehler Heimann) learned to love this art. It became a hobby.

WILLIAM PHILIP (SCHELDT) ERF, JR. was born in Lyme Township, Huron County, February 6, 1898, the son and youngest child of William and Minnie (Boehler) Scheldt Erf. He was a member of Immanuel Evangelical Church, and later a member of the Congregational Church.

He was a graduate of Lyme and Bellevue High Schools and took courses in agriculture and dairying at O. S. U. Following in his father's footsteps, he took up the work of farming and specialized in the dairy industry at an early age, when his father was incapacitated by illness. It was through his efforts and those of his three sisters, Norma, Cora, and Elzy W., that they carried on the herd of registered Guernsey cattle on the home farm known as "Chestnut Ridge Farm." Some very creditable records were made in this herd and much effort was spent in establishing the "Golden Guernsey" Milk Market in Ohio.

He continued at his chosen work and gave much of his time to the furthering of public accomplishments, including the new school building. He was president of the school board; the first president of the Cleveland Milk Producer's Federation and president of the Ohio Guernsey Breeders Association at the time of his death. He met with an accidental traffic death at the age of forty-two years, with much planned work left undone.

A genial man, a profound student of his work. His ability and success, his broad outlook on life, and the habit of always "going the second mile" made him a friend and neighbor sincerely beloved. He was killed February 2, 1940.

He was married on June 21, 1928, to MARGUERITE ALICE CLAYTON, daughter of John and Elizabeth Jones Clayton, of North Monroeville, who is a graduate of Monroeville High School, a graduate of Huron County Normal School, and a teacher by profession.

He had two children: JEAN ERF IRWIN, born October 8, 1929, and WILLIAM CLAYTON ERF, born July 6, 1933.
